Angry Mob Shouts Down Pierre

Disgusted prime minister turns away from shouts and forest of protest signs outside Seaforth Armory

'Dictatorship Seed' Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was pelted with papers and a banana peel Friday night by an angry crowd of war protesters that smashed a window and set a fire at the Seaforth Armory where he was speaking.

Chanting "Trudeau is a traitor," about 300 placard-carrying demonstrators pounded on the armory doors shortly after the prime minister entered the building to attend a Liberal fund-raising dinner.

The prime minister went inside surrounded by security men after he was unsuccessful in an attempt to speak to the demonstrators from the top of a sound truck.

After arriving, Mr. Trudeau hopped up on a sound truck and attempted to speak to the demonstrators, mostly young people. He was hit in the back by a banana peel and others threw wads of paper at him.

He jumped off the truck and was whisked inside after shouts and screams prevented him from being heard. Some of the demonstrators followed him up to the door and pounded on it.

Others broke a window in the armory. The crowd quieted a few minutes later and moved across the street to a park where they ate rice and drank tea.

A heap of paper and cardboard was set ablaze a few feet from the armory door. The blaze was extinguished by police a few seconds later.

Inside the armory, the 1,100 dinner guests were eating roast Long Island duck with orange sauce.

The demonstrators carried signs reading "Our PET is a male chauvinist pig," "End Canada's Complicity in Vietnam," "No money, no education, we need jobs or an education."

The unidentified girl who hit the prime minister with the banana peel carried one reading: "Hustle grain, not

'Do You Have to Be President of U.S.?'

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A commissionaire at the Abbotsford International Air Show firmly blocked the way Friday when a man attempted to follow Prime Minister Trudeau and his party of cabinet ministers as they retired to an office area.

"How do you get identified?" the man asked. "Do you have to be president of the United States?"

'Like V-E at Ogden Point'

Russians Fined, Cheered

Two Soviet fishing vessels were warmly cheered by thousands of Victorians when they sailed from Ogden Point just before 10 p.m. Friday after the two skippers had been fined $2,500 each on charges of fishing within Canada's 12-mile limit.

"It was like V-E Day at Ogden Point," photographer Jim Ryan said. "There were people with children, with baby carriages and babes in arms."

"Girls were kissing and hugging the Russian seamen. The Russians were giving kids apples and older people Russian cigarettes. They invited people aboard the trawlers to look around. The whole area was jammed with cars and people."

Mr. Ryan said he heard one small child say to his mother "Mummy, they don't look very mean to me."

One of the Russian crewmen told a fisheries officer in broken English that "if you ever come into our territory, all we'll do is get you drunk," the photographer said.

George Dawson of King Bros., ship agents, said he felt the events at the dock "cemented good relations in some manner with the Russians."

"They met a lot of people and when they left they were cheered. It was a very friendly demonstration."

The ships were under orders to return directly to Russia, where, according to one of the skippers, they will face another trial.

The trial of Capt. Edward John Morozov, 29, of the Soviet fishing vessel Gherman Titov resumed Friday with the defence calling as its first witness Capt. Boris Rolenko, 28, master of the second Soviet trawler, the Kouzachin.

Both trawlers, of the side dragger type, were seized Aug. 4 and escorted to Victoria by the Canadian Fisheries patrol vessel Howay, under the command of Capt. Chesley Power.

The charges of fishing within Canada's 12-mile limit were laid under the Canadian Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, which provides for a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine and confiscation of the vessel or the catch or both.

Judge William Ostler ruled at the start of the trial Thursday that the Soviet captains would be tried separately. However, when the trial of Capt. Morozov ended Friday, counsel for both sides agreed the evidence submitted in the Morozov case be accepted as applying to the Rolenko case. Judge Ostler then pronounced sentence.

Capt. Rolenko testified the Soviet fleet, of which the Gherman Tivov and Kouzachin were a part, moved from its winter fishing grounds in the Bering Strait to fish off Oregon and the west coast of Vancouver Island in April this year.

Through two court interpreters, he described the fishing operation of the Soviet trawlers in some detail. It was the policy of the Soviet fleet, he said, to set nets at a distance of about 1.5 miles on the international side of the Canadian limit and then head out to sea.

He did not deny being in Canadian waters when the Howay pulled alongside the Soviet vessels at 7:19 a.m. Monday.

PARIS (AP) — France, bowing to pressures inside and outside the country, devalued the franc by 12½ per cent Friday.

The immediate result makes French goods more competitive in world trade, promising better stability to the economy, but the over-all effect may be to bring other nations' currencies under pressure and throw the international monetary situation into confusion.

Britain officially sought to dispel any thoughts of a new devaluation of the pound.

NOT SO SURE

"We have no comment except to rule out any possibility of Britain following France," said a treasury spokesman in London. Others there were not so sure.

Sir George Bolton, chairman of the Bank of London and South America, commented:

"The French devaluation will cause another period of anxiety among the leading foreign currencies. If any leading currency is devalued for domestic rea-

Plane Lost In Fraser

A ferry attendant on the Fraser River near Big Bar Creek in the B.C. Chilcotin has reported a light aircraft hitting the aerial cable of the ferry at around 7:45 p.m. Friday and going into the river, the Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Vancouver reported.

Number of people on board or the destination of the aircraft is not known. RCMP will start dragging operations early today.

Smaller Profits Just One Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday the federal government will apply voluntary restraints urged by the Economic Council of Canada by curtailing inflationary trends in the government itself.

Asked if he thought voluntary curbs could work, the prime minister said: "I'm saying it's a first start and I'm saying that as a government we are going to apply that voluntary restraint. (See also Page 5)

"In our case, in the case of the government, it will mean curtailing many different programs. We'll tell the people that they can't at the same time complain about inflation and then ask for the government to be spending more money . . ."

The prime minister said getting people "to face their responsibilities" would be a government responsibility.

"For businessmen this will mean instead of increasing the prices it could mean reducing the profits," he said.

Air Dive Fatal As Trudeau Attends Show

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A young American pilot was killed Friday when his home-built aircraft crashed half a mile from where Prime Minister Trudeau and six cabinet ministers were watching an air show.

The Mini-Mustang, piloted by Scott Nelskog, 20, of Edmonds, Wash., dived into the ground just after Mr. Trudeau, in 80-degree weather, opened the Abbotsford international air show.

The tiny, 85-horsepower plane was one of two performing before Mr. Trudeau and a crowd of 40,000. It completed a roll and nose-dived into the ground from 200 feet.

There was no fire and most of the crowd were not aware of the crash until emergency vehicles raced to the scene.

It was the first fatal accident in the popular air show's eight-year history.

Mr. Trudeau arrived by helicopter from Vancouver to open the three-day show, North America's largest, 40 miles east of Vancouver.

It is expected to draw more than 300,000 people by the time the show ends Sunday.

The prime minister spent about three hours there. After viewing the Bell 206-A turbine helicopter, he made his way through a jostling crowd, which gave him a quiet greeting, clapping and whistling.

★ ★ ★

Security was tight. At one stage, Mr. Marchand, who was not wearing an identity badge, was refused admission to the second-floor office area from which the prime minister's party watched the show.

Campground Shootup Fatal to Five

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)— A shooting spree which authorities said apparently erupted from an attempted eviction left five persons dead, including the alleged gunman, his parents and a minister, at a church campground in a Birmingham suburb Friday.

Police said Charles Hagood, 33, who lived at the campground, was believed to have done the shootings, which also injured a sixth person. Hagood's body was found in the house when officers rushed him.

Quality Standards Now Official

Pure Water Rules Old Hat Here

By IAN STREET

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark says the province's new water quality standards which were officially proclaimed Friday had already been in effect in Greater Victoria for the past three months.

He said the new standards, produced after many months of work, were already being enforced and had been for some time. Medical health officers in Greater Victoria and elsewhere were made aware in advance of the major provisions.

"So far as domestic sewage is concerned," said Mr. Loffmark, "there will be no change in my stand, and municipalities can continue to expect that I will insist upon treatment of sewage before discharge, with the single exception of the outfall at Macaulay Point."

"In no case," he said, "is it intended that the standards will authorize discharge that will bring the receiving body of water up to the minimum level.

"Where the quality of water is presently well within the accepted level, it will be expected to remain so."

At a press conference Friday, Victoria Socred candidates Trade Minister Waldo Skillings and Public Works Minister W. N. Chant both endorsed the new water quality standards. Mr. Chant said his department was spending up to $300,000 on construction of a sewer line serving the new Victoria Vocational School and Glendale Hospital, to prevent further pollution of the Gorge.

Mr. Loffmark said the purpose of the new standards was to secure and maintain such water quality levels in the province, both for drinking waters and surface waters, as would give assured protection for human health and safety.

The document has been drawn up in a form that will permit modification and amendment as new information becomes available.

The document states the policy of the health branch regarding all surface, ground and salt waters is to encourage programs which will provide waters of the best

Travelogue

LEFTOVERS from the annual three weeks with pay . . .

IF YOU'VE become a little bored with the same old scenery on the Rogers Pass section of the Trans-Canada Highway, I offer an alternative. Try the Yellowhead route instead. It wanders from Kamloops through beautiful country to Jasper, from where you can either head into Edmonton or on to Banff and Calgary. It's a new highway in excellent condition, a very easy, relaxing drive and at this point, the traffic is minimal compared to the Rogers Pass . . .

Yet, even on this idyllic route, man's stupidity is evident and appalling. Outside the little community of Barriere, which is north of Kamloops, you come on a valley to match anything, anywhere. But the morning we passed through it, the sun was almost obliterated by a dense pall of grey smoke emanating from a sawmill. A spot of rare beauty scarred by air pollution.

That's Gagiardi country and I wonder if Phil has made any effort to have the situation rectified or if he will when re-elected. The re-elected bit is a foregone conclusion, my friends. I hope he finds time after the electioneering to at least look into the matter . . .

CROSS the border into Alberta and bilingualism hits you at every corner. All stop signs now also carry the word, "arret," which left more than one U.S. tourist scratching his head . . . Edmonton and Calgary involved in a frenetic race to see which city can build more and higher buildings. At the moment the race is about even, although Edmonton planners are evidencing much greater esthetic sense by leaving pleasing open areas around their skyscrapers. In Calgary, it's a hodgepodge of one skyscraper smack dab against another, much the same as Vancouver's English Bay area . . .

ALBERTANS, incidentally, seem to be more interested in the B.C. election than British Columbians. Their removed-from-the-scene concensus — ol' WAC should win again. To many of them, fat cat happy under a Socred regime, it is unthinkable for B.C. to make a switch at this time.

Dont't expect to find any worthwhile eating establishments between Vancouver and the Alberta metropolises. The whole route is a gastronomic disaster area. But I do recommend a little hole-in-the-wall restaurant in Vancouver if you're an Italian food buff. It's called Al Ritrovo's and all I can tell you is that the food is great and that the place is located somewhere near Empire Stadium . . .

I SUGGEST to you that higway engineers are blind in one eye and can't see out the other. Too often they set the broken lines — which signify passing areas — in absolutely unsafe conditions. Many times it would be complete folly to pass at these broken-line areas because the driver's vision just can't cover the whole broken line distance either through curves in the road or because of crests. In other words, don't trust your life to the say-so of a road marker who has not done a competent job . . .

AS USUAL, any family trip to Vancouver should include a morning at the Stanley Park zoo and in particular, a ringside seat at the aquarium show featuring Skana the whale. Tremendous entertainment from an obviously highly-intelligent mammal . . . Drivers in Calgary should be restricted to the 2½-mile oval at Indianapolis. Traffic conditions here might not be ideal, but compared to those in ol' Cowtown, they're rocking-chair easy . . . Is there anything in our province more awe-inspiring than Hell's Gate Canyon? . . .

THE accumulation of mail is calling for attention. I'll deal with some of it in a later column, but to the B.C. Liberals who took unbrage at my suggestion the party is in sad state of disrepair, I would point out I have neither read nor heard anything earth-shattering as yet in the present election campaign being conducted by them. Would it be fair to assume the Pierre kissing bit isn't about to help them this time around?

Unusual Signs Indicate Contraceptive Trouble

By G. T. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About 10 months ago I had a "loop" installed as a contraceptive. It was fine except for a slight bleeding which would last for about two weeks after the end of a menstrual period. The doctor said it was not serious.

More recently, however, I've noticed a slight discharge with a bad ordor from the vagina. I have been cauterized twice, but still have the discharge. I also had a Pap test which was negative.

I'm thinking about having the loop removed but would like your opinion. Should I have another cancer test? — Mrs. T. B.

Bleeding, irritation, and discharge are among the complications that bother some women who use the "loops," "spirals" or other intrauterine contraceptive devices (IUCDs).

Since you are one who is encountering these troubles, I am not surprised that you are considering its removal. Indeed, I don't know why you are hesitating.

Yes, have another cancer (Pap) test. I would suggest every four to six months for a time, just to be safe. As a routine matter, it is wise for women to have the test every 6 to 12 months anyway.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My brother works with a jackhammer breaking up concrete. The sound is so bad that for a while after he gets home, he can't hear too well. He has started wearing ear muffs which help a great deal.

My question is, wuld having his mouth open with a pencil in it, help relieve the pressure from the noise? My mother thought it would help. — A. L.

Your brother is wise to have started wearing the ear muffs. I am not familiar with the pencil-in-the-mouth theory, but doubt that it would help. The problem isn't pressure building up; it is the impact of strong sound fine structures of the inner ear, waves, which can damage the sons, one cannot help wondering who comes next."

In Ottawa, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said there will be no effect on the Canadian dollar, which has been strong in recent months.

Certainly quick to be affected will be the African and other countries which align their currencies with France. Finance ministers of these countries have been invited to meet here Sunday with Valery Giscard d'Estaing, economics minister.

The United States treasury said the devaluation was an adjustment to economic developments in France and will not affect the strength of the dollar. U.S. currency is pegged to gold in that an ounce of gold is officially worth $35.

DOWN MONDAY

Until now the franc has been worth 20 U.S. cents in international dealings. Effective Monday it will be worth 17½ cents.

Last November, Charles de Gaulle, then president, vetoed devaluation of the franc after it had been deemed all but done. In the months since then there has been no improvement in the French trade and reserves position.

Georges Pompidou, who succeeded de Gaulle in June, told his ministers at a special cabinet meeting late Friday: "After receiving reports on all the aspects of our financial situation, I reached the conclusion that a modification of the parity of the franc is inevitable. The prime minister and the finance minister share this conviction."

BRUTAL DEFLATION

He reported the franc being traded abroad at a large discount, and asserted: "To try to overcome this handicap would be to choose a policy of brutal deflation which would impose unbearable sacrifices and massive unemployment in the country."

Water

This will be done by restoring to a condition which is necessary for the protection of public health those waters which are at present below the desired quality; and conserving those not yet adversely affected.

Under the heading of implementation, it states: "No plan (for public water or sewage) will be approved under the Health Act which does not require all wastes, prior to discharge into any waters, to receive the best practicable degree of treatment consistent with the water quality standards."

Mr. Loffmark said preparation of the standards had been a major task incorporating recommendations from the Pollution Control Board, provincial medical health officers, and the Pacific Northwest Pollution Control Council. B.C. is a member of that council, together with the states of Alaska, Idaho, Oregon, Montana and Washington.

The minister added the section of the standards dealing with drinking water quality was "almost identical" with the Canadian drinking water standards and objectives, first published in 1968.

The code, promised by Mr. Loffmark last September, sets out specific standards to govern the quality of water used for drinking and cooking, recreation, and shellfish propagation.

It lasts maximum limits on the amount of pollutants that will be allowed in water used for each purpose.

The standards have been sent to health unit directors throughout B.C. with instructions to enforce them under the Health Act or to refer violations to the pollution control branch.

The code lists four clases of water for which different standards will apply:

Class A — Drinking water having no other treatment than disinfection and simple removal of naturally present impurities.

Class B — Drinking water having adequate treatment of coagulation, sedimentation filtration, disinfection and additional treatment to remove impurities.

For each class of water the standards set out allowable concentrations of coliform bacteria, toxic substances, pesticides and other chemicals, radioactive material, oils, floating solids and sludge deposits.

Mob Shouts Down Trudeau

women." At one point the prime minister reached out and tore down the placard, but it was quickly replaced.

With Mr. Trudeau still inside and the crowd swelling, 14 policemen, under inspector Bud Errington, were lined shoulder to shoulder with their backs against the double armory doors.

But things remained quiet and, apart from the hard core of flag-waving and Congo-drum-beating demonstrators, most were content to stand and watch.

Inside the armory, the prime minister referred to the demonstration as an exercise in "verbal violence."

"I think society welcomes dissent," he said. "It is good for us to have a social consciousness.

"It's a bit annoying but on balance I think it's something we should accept."

But, he said, the demonstration outside contained "the seed of totalitarism . . ."

"This is the seed of dictatorship and this is the seed we must fight against."

He said Hilda Thomas, the spokesman for the anti-war group, had seemed very dedicated.

"The strange thing," said Mr. Trudeau, "is that the person, and she seemed very dedicated and very disclaiming . . . she was speaking to the crowd, she was pleading the cause for Canada doing something about the war, ceasing our co-operation with the United States. But nobody was listening to her — they were all shouting.

He said there is no excuse for resorting to violence so long as there is freedom of speech.

Shipping Improvements

Soviets, China Sign Frontier River Pact

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union and China Friday agreed to improve navigation and marine traffic on the Ussuri-Amur River system which forms about 1,500 miles of their far eastern border, the news agency Tass said.

The agreement was reached by the joint Sino-Soviet commission on border river shipping at Khabarovsk, about 150 miles north of Damansky Island on the Ussuri River where Soviet and Chinese troops were engaged in bloody frontier clashes last March.

Tass said Soviet and Chinese representatives on the commission Friday signed a protocol "regarding agreement by the two sides to carry out during 1969 navigation season certain measures to improve the shipping situation" on these border rivers.

Both sides also agreed that the next meeting of the joint commission would be held in China in 1970, Tass said.

The commission, set up in a 1951 treaty in the heyday of friendship between Peking and Moscow, regulates shipping along the far eastern boundary rivers, including the Amur, Ussuri, Argumi and Sungach Rivers and Lake Hanka.

PREVIOUS MEETING

The previous meeting of the commission was held in 1968 in Harbin, China, but the session broke up in mutual recriminations. There was no session in 1968.

The two giant Cimmunist nations decided to resume border river talks in May this year, after a series of border clashes in the Damansky Island area. At least 50 Soviet soldiers were killed in the clashes.

Tass gave no details of Friday's agreement.

The mixed commission did not deal with overall Sino-Soviet problems as the Russians insisted its authority was limited to technical matters connected with traffic on the Amur and Ussuri rivers and their tributaries.

However, diplomatic observers here said that the agreement, although it did not touch on any of the major issues which divided the two nations, may be the first step toward reduction of tension between them.

'Green Beret' Lawyers Get Secrets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two civilian attorneys for one of the eight U.S. servicemen involved in the Vietnam Green Beret murder investigation were given access to secret information by the defence department Friday.

A spokesman said other civilian lawyers would be given the same security clearance.

Already cleared were George Gregory and David Trice of Cheraw, S.C., who have been retained on behalf of Major Thomas Middleton, of Jefferson, S..C

The Pentagon said three other special forces officers involved in the top-secret inquiry into the murder of an unidentified Vietnamese have arranged for the services of civilian attorneys and these would be given clearance and other assistance.

They were Guy Scott of Athens, Ga., on behalf of Capt. Budge Williams; Robert McKinley of Newark, N.J., for Capt. Robert Marasco, and George Latimer for Sgt. Alvin Smith, of Naples, Fla.

The defence department spokesman said that all eight Green Berets have also been assigned military counsel from the judge advocate-general's staff and been advised of their rights as prospective defendants in a court martial for murder.

Department spokesman Jerry Friedheim was asked if President Nixon had been advised of the facts in the case. "I don't know," he replied.

Asked if he knew the facts, Friedheim responded: "I don't know that I know all the facts."

Thus far all that has been disclosed is that the eight are under "pre-trial investigation" on charges of murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

The defence department issued a list of the defendants' rights under military law:

- Right to be present at the investigation and to testify on their own behalf or remain silent.
- Right to individual qualified military counsel without expense to themselves, or the right to individual civilian counsel at their own expense. All counsel must be qualified attorneys.
- Right to a speedy trial.
- Right to sufficient time to prepare their own defence.
- Right to present evidence at the investigation and to cross-examine witnesses.
- Right to be furnished copies of the charges and allied papers.

Under ordinary circumstances, courts martial are open but they can be closed on grounds that national security information is involved.

Americans Oust Russian

Russians Oust American

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department announced Friday the expulsion on spy charges of a Soviet diplomat long stationed at the United Nations. Moscow retaliated by ousting an American embassy officer.

Secrecy surrounded the case against the expelled Russian, 44-year-old Igor L. Andreyev. State department officials indicated that on security grounds they would give out no more than the bare announcement.

The American ordered out of Moscow is Milton Kovner, 39, listed as an economic counsellor with the U.S. embassy.

Kovner, who arrived on his Moscow assignment a couple of months ago, was previously in the state department intelligence section. But the department said the Soviets made clear they were ordering him out only in retaliation, not for any improper activities. He is to leave Moscow Tuesday.

Andreyev had been a counsellor officer at the Soviet UN mission. He had been in the United States since 1958, except in 1963-65.

SPY CHARGE

The spokesman, Carl Bartch, refused to give any particulars about Andreyev's alleged espionage activities except to say they constituted "abuse" of the arrangements under which the United States allows the entry of foreign diplomats to serve at the UN.

Andreyev left the United States on July 22 after U.S. representatives brought the complaint against him to the office of UN Secretary-General U Thant and to the Soviet mission at the UN July 14, Bartch said. The Soviet Union denied the charges against him.

The tit-for-tat expulsions were the latest in a long series dating back to the Cold War days after the Second World War.

Rogers Gives U.S. Stand

Peking Urged to Resume Tension-Easing Parley

CANBERRA (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of state William Rogers Friday called on communist China to resume talks with the United States aimed at reducing world tension.

Rogers told a packed luncheon meeting of the Australian national press club the United States will soon seek resumption of Warsaw talks which were broken off by the Chinese on Feb. 18.

He spoke for 18 minutes during a break in his talks with Australia and New Zealand as the U.S. delegate to the 19th council meeting of the ANZUS defence pact. He is nearing the end of an extensive Asian tour.

Rogers said that in seeking resumption of talks with China the United States had no intention of bowing to Peking's demands that "we first abandon support of our ally, the Republic of China."

He added: "We nonetheless look forward to a time when we can enter into a useful dialogue and to a reduction of tensions. We would welcome a renewal of the talks with communist China.

"This could take place in Warsaw or at another mutually acceptable site."

Referring to the Sino-Soviet dispute, Rogers said "It is our intention not to take sides in the struggle between China and the Soviet Union but to seek to improve our relationship with either or both."

Rogers downgraded Peking's current capacity to assume a role in the world as a "great power." He said "we should remember that this power is potential more than actual. I believe there is a tendency in many quarters to build up the Chinese communists by equating their capabilities with their rhetoric."

★ ★ ★

He added: "I doubt very much if Peking's leaders really consider that they are threatened by the military strength of the United States. I suspect they sense that the real threat to them comes fro mthe superior performance of open societies. The evidence is all around them."

Casualties Mount in Vietnam

Expected Flareup On Now?

SAIGON (AP) — United States officers said Friday they still were uncertain whether the renewal of heavy fighting in South Vietnam heralds a new communist drive which had been expected in August.

Fighting in the 24 hours ending Thursday brought the heaviest casualties since a battlefield lull began nearly two months ago.

In the period, spokesmen here listed 147 communist troops and 14 American and 17 South Vietnamese soldiers killed in significant actions ranging from the demilitarized zone in the north to the Saigon area. Another 164 Americans and 51 South Vietnamese were wounded.

A U.S. command spokesman said the increased ground fighting "is not necessarily an indication of increased enemy-initiated activity."

"We are catching him on sweeps," he added.

"We may be catching him before he gets ready to do something. Several of the actions were initiated by allied forces. . . . It's too early to be specific about the significance."

The South Vietnamese government announced a shakeup in its military command Friday, replacing commanders of the 5th and 18th divisions, which U.S. officers considered the worst in the army.

Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Van Hieu, commander of a division in the central highlands, was named to command the 5th and Brig.-Gen. Lam Quant Tho, who commanded an infantry school near Saigon, took over the 18th. U.S. officers said privately they welcomed the changes.

There were 12 transfers or promotions designed to strengthen the command structure and to silence criticism that too many political generals hold important posts.

Eight women and 16 men were convicted by a Saigon military court on charges connected with the attempted assassinations of Premier Tran Van Huong March 5 and Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Van Kiem,, chief of the presidential military staff, Feb. 1.

LIFE SENTENCES

Three men convicted of attempted murder were given life sentences. The women received sentences of from one to five years. The 13 other men received lighter sentences, since they were accused only of not reporting the assassination plots to authorities.

Ulster's Dilemma

WITH GREAT RELUCTANCE, Northern Ireland's Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark may be forced to call upon the British government to use troops to control his unruly countrymen.

Belfast has been the major trouble spot in the past few days where Protestant and Roman Catholic mobs have fought, burned and looted, with both sides furiously resisting the attempts of police and firemen to separate them and to quench the blazes they set.

More than 200 have been seriously injured.

But an even greater emergency is threatened in Londonderry next Tuesday when 30,000 Protestant youths, gathering from every part of Ulster, plan to march, and the Roman Catholics are expected to attempt counter-demonstratations. Inevitably this would lead to a collision with wholly unpredictable consequences.

Britain's Home Secretary James Callaghan is reported to be apprehensive that the Royal Ulster Constabulary, although reputedly one of the world's finest police forces, will be unable to cope with such an explosive contingency.

British troops already are in Ulster, but thus far have not been called upon to do more than guard water and power facilities. But now 5,000 of them have been alerted, and the first elements of another battalion have been flown to reinforce them.

If it is necessary to throw these men into the anticipated action in Londonderry, even if unarmed, they will predictably be the targets of both sides. Moreover such intervention will almost certainly discredit the Chichester-Clark administration and encourage Roman Catholic sympathizers from the Republic of Ireland to join the engagement. This could create a condition of chaos with the gravest potential.

It was suggested at one point that church leaders should take the initiative to induce both Protestants and Roman Catholics to abandon their violence and heed the government's appeal for reason while it continues to pursue a solution to their grievances. So far there has been no report of such persuasion by churchmen—except at the local level.

It would seem to be required that an effort be made both by London and Rome — however unlikely of success — to bring all possible church influence to bear.

Otherwise, as a last resort, for the protection of life and property the authorities may be compelled to call in troops — a development no one really wants, least of all the British government.

The sad thing is that military suppression of possible riots in Londonderry would only make a final settlement of Ulster's tragic problems more difficult, feeding afresh the hatreds that are born of intolerance, and creating further resentment.

It is a dilemma which defies solution.

Ontario Ahead

AMONG RECOMMENDATIONS recently submitted to the provincial cabinet by the B.C. Pollution Control Board was the suggestion that, effective at the beginning of 1971, all new licensed gasoline-powered motor vehicles sold in the province should be required to have pollution control devices "as developed by that time by the motor vehicle industry". If the British Columbia government accepts the recommendation and doesn't go beyond it, this province will still be a long way behind Ontario.

The Ontario cabinet has just issued new regulations to cut exhaust pollution from cars and trucks manufactured in 1970 by 30 per cent from current allowable levels. The new standards will be enforced on the roads by mobile testing vans, equipped to measure hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions and, in the case of diesel trucks, the opacity of the exhaust. The regulations set out how the manufacturers are to determine the pollution levels allowable in their new cars and trucks, and require them to apply for a certificate of approval of new control systems.

Since Ontario is the biggest provincial market for cars in Canada, it may be that the manufacturers will gear all their products to that province's demands. But it certainly would help ensure this result if British Columbia, the province with by far the highest percentage of car owners among its residents, were to adopt the Ontario regulations.

Beauty Contest

VICTORIA'S hanging flower baskets have been so widely copied that the city shouldn't be embarrassed about borrowing another good idea from elsewhere. We have in mind the Trillium Awards of Hamilton, Ont. Two property-beautification contests a year, spring and summer, enable Hamiltonians to nominate neighbors whose property is outstandingly attractive or has been remarkably improved in the past year. Volunteer judges make the awards — little iron trilliums, the mark of the community's appreciation.

The Hamilton Spectator has remarked that the competition, at minute cost to taxpayers, probably is the city's best public investment.

Washington Calling

Grim Prospect for the United States

By MARQUIS CHILDS

THE news that counted last week did not come out of Asia or Europe, nor from any of the capitals on the Nixon grand tour. It came out of the board room of the corporation with more power than any other to set the pace of the economy.

The United States Steel Corporation announced a price increase of nearly 5 per cent on rolled steel, the product that goes into cars, refrigerators, all the hard goods in the affluent living standard. The timing of the announcement was almost as remarkable as what it said.

* * *

Here was the United States' president in foreign parts, moving in triumphal procession through capital after capital, plunging into crowds in Jakarta and Lahore as though his political future hung on the voters there. He had left home with a solemn exhortation to pass the surtax as a check rein on the inflationary spiral.

This was the moment the executives of Big Steel chose to initiate a price increase certain to be followed by every other producer.

These are the president's friends. They helped to put him in office, giving generously of their money to swell the swollen coffers of the Nixon campaign fund. Yet at a critical point in the struggle against inflation, with a touch-and-go chance of restraining the price spiral, they delivered this blow.

There can be no illusions about its consequences. The price increase will be passed along on autos, ash cans, roller skates, containers, every conceivable product. It will not be 5 per cent but 10 and 12 and 15. For that is what happens when an increase in the basic stuff of steel is passed on.

The steel corporation gave rising costs, particularly labor costs, as the reason for the jump. But this will fuel the demand for still higher wages when the big trade union contracts expire next year. Advance reports indicate the unions in basic industries will not settle for less than 10 or 12 per cent. If the Nixon administration cannot persuade its friends in business to use restraint, it is hard to see how labor can be held back by words of caution.

* * *

Between the Nixon team and the world of industry and finance a curious love-hate relationship is developing. The love goes back to the origins of Republicanism, the half-suppressed hate to the difficulties of trying to control an economy threatened with runaway inflation. A recent episode dramatically illustrates the ambivalence of the Nixon Washington to the power centre in New York.

The president was bound to ask William McChesney Martin Jr. to stay on as chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System. For the financial community, Martin is the symbol of stability and conservative fiscal-monetary management. He would stay in place in the first year of the new administration as assurance that all would be well in that department.

* * *

But at an off-the-record meeting with the top bankers in New York just before the stock market started down the big slide, Martin reversed his role. He excoriated the bankers. He accused them of lending money for speculation in the stock market and for financing conglomerates and setting up their own holding companies to operate businesses with no connection with banking. And the record 8½ per cent prime interest rate came in for his stern censure.

You are inviting a panic and you may get one, said Martin in his role of scourge of the money changers. The bankers listened in stunned silence. As one of them put it later, "You could imagine that you were hearing not Bill Martin but his enemy and our enemy, Wright Patman (chairman of the House banking and currency committee who has repeatedly tangled with Martin).

Finally, two or three of those present roused themselves to deny the charges. They were not guilty of these crimes and misdemeanors.

In the end, however, a younger bank president, head of one of the smaller banks, rose with a confession of general guilt. Why, he is reported to have said, should we lie to our friend? We have done these things and now we are being called upon to answer for them.

Martin was not, of course, speaking for the Nixon administration. But he was expressing, more frankly than anyone on the Nixon team has done thus far, the concern widely felt in Washington over dubious and inflationary practices on the part of the financial community.

At his last session in the Treasury with the bankers, Secretary David Kennedy was more gentle in his exhortation. He pleaded with them not to let the prime rate go any higher than the record 8½ per cent. Don't worry, he said at this closed meeting, about our firmness. We will take unemployment as a means of curing inflation.

* * *

As prices continue to rise and unemployment notably in the ghettos, inches up, the grim prospect is for both inflation and a jobless rate of 4 per cent to 4½ per cent. Without continuance of the 10 per cent surtax on which the Nixon team put such heavy emphasis, inflation would conceivably be worse. But as a cure that unhappy analogy, a Band Aid on a cancer, has a familiar ring.

Ghana's General Election

All Promises, Promises . . .

By CAMERON DUODO
from Accra

ON the day that man first set foot on the moon it was my job to follow one of Ghana's new politicians around his prospective constituency to see how the campaign for the general election of August 29 is shaping up.

A very loud propaganda van, painted in bright colors, drew the sleepy villagers onto the streets to hear what the candidate had to say. Ghana is going to elect this West African country's first civilian government since Dr. Kwame Nkrumah was overthrown by the army in February 1966. And from that date until May this year all political activity was banned in the land.

So, after being gagged for three years, what did politicking in a new dawn for democracy sound like? Alas there was little change. It was all promises, promises.

* * *

The bad roads would be repaired. Clinics and hospitals would be built. So would schools. The farmers would be paid more for their cocoa.

The last promise — to raise the price of cocoa — sounded pretty rash. For only a few months ago, the Ghana government did raise the price. It also announced measures aimed at encouraging farmers to increase their production of cocoa. And as soon as the news reached the international cocoa markets, the world price fell, in anticipation of a larger crop from Ghana.

Perhaps the candidate was not aware of this. Was he also unaware of how much Ghana owes foreign countries? At the last count, the total figure stood at over $950 million, a figure swollen by a very high interest component, because the debts had been incurred largely through suppliers' credits.

* * *

Moreover, in order to make his promises, he was himself contributing to the national debt. He was consuming gasoline. His car had been imported. Each party had tried to import a car for each constituency (there are 140 of them). The people who shout into the loudspeakers have to be paid. After the public rallies were over, influential people in the villages had to be entertained, so that they would continue to canvass votes for the candidate after he had left: schnapps for the more influential men, local gin or palm wine for the more pedestrian; cash for "lorry fares" and "chop" . . .

From whom was the politician going to recoup all this after he had entered parliament? Who was financing his campaign, and if it was a rich businessman, what would be the pay-off after the election was won? A little less tar on the roads than the specification? A clinic whose roof would begin to leak before it was commissioned for use?

In one corner of a chief's house, where the candidate was expatiating on his party's virtues, I saw a three-year-old boy sitting quietly and not showing the slightest interest in the proceedings. He looked almost like a picture from Biafra. His hair had browned off, the skin was shrivelled and taut and his ribs stood out closely packed together above a distended stomach. The eyes in the big head were expressionless, shutting away whatever went on inside that head.

I stopped pretending to write down what the politician was saying and went to look for the child's mother. She said she had taken him to the hospital twice but that he wasn't improving. His two-year-old brother was equally sick, and the one-year-old on her back was just beginning to show signs.

I advised the woman to ask the doctor to tell her what the children should be fed on when they left hospital. The little money that was offered to help her seemed like a fortune to her. I began to appreciate the meaning of those tiny sums which the economists call Annual Per Capita Income.

Back in the chief's house, the candidate was waxing even more eloquent. The painful difference between reality and political gloss lay on my spirits like a cloud.

A Dark Silence?

New Slant on Things

From The Ottawa Journal

WITH the noisy Commons closed and gone home, so to speak, it is easier to be philosophical about an incident that took place on its closing day.

Donald MacInnis, NDP, had the day before asked the prime minister a question that was a mixture of mischief, bad taste and legitimate curiosity. It was:

"Because of resignations at the National Arts Centre, I ask the secretary of state whether Mademoiselle Madeleine Gobeil is still a director of the National Arts Centre and have other personal friends of the prime minister been appointed?"

The prime minister greeted the question with perhaps the treatment it deserved — silence.

But next morning when the matter came up indirectly, Mr. Trudeau told Mr. MacInnis' deskmate to tell Mr. MacInnis "not to ask me any questions because I do not answer people who are not gentlemen."

Well now, that's a new slant on things.

There is so far as we know no law saying that only gentlemen may get into the Commons.

In fact there is no law saying what a gentleman is and is not (except the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod).

If a prime minister is going to make up a little black book of those who are not gentlemen, we foresee strange results.

It could get so that no self-respecting member of the Opposition could afford not to be in that book, lest he be accused of being gutless or unable to ask a tough question.

And, if this distinction between gentleman and ungentleman develops, will Opposition members in turn refuse to ask questions of cabinet minister whom they feel are not gentlemen?

We can see a dark silence developing in the Commons, like that behind the moon; wherein only the lady members will be able to talk; and as now there is only one, Mrs. Grace MacInnis, she will not dare lest she be accused of talking to herself in which case Trudeau could decree her to be not only not a gentleman but insane.

Unpopular Opinions

The Social Climate

By W. A. FERGUSON, M.A.

THE phrase, The Social Climate, roughly equivalent to unformulated public opinion, is an abstract expression by which modern people try to escape from their personal responsibilities. After all what is the Social Climate but you and me? Or at least we are the creators of it, and, the most creative section of it as that of parents, under the age of 45.

It is often suggested, with much truth, that these parents are in the last analysis, responsible for the general lawlessness, even violence, of their young people in the universities and streets, and that they could quite well restore a better state of society if they brought up their young children to understand authority and obedience to rules. But they vigorously deny this on the grounds that the Social Climate is so strongly in favor of complete permissiveness that even when they mean well they are helpless.

In fact, however, all that is needed is for them, and the rest of us, to alter our own outlook and so to set out to cure the trouble. Unfortunately there is no other way, and unless we do this the outlook for society, as many moralists and teachers point out, is not cheerful.

To take one instance of what might be done overnight, in our local newspapers there is a list, compiled by the PTA and other educators, of the kind of films our young people and children should be allowed to see. It is true that the cinemas do label some films as "adult", but it is doubtful that many parents exercise much control in this matter, and young people see them if they can get away with it.

If both parents are employed outside the home for the better part of the day, it is likely that the children will be on the streets and in the cafes without any sort of supervision. These are the conditions that foster the formation of gangs with their often militant rivalry, and so lead to uncontrolled rioting and violence. Of course, speaking of children returning from school to an empty house, for obvious reasons we are bound to indict the mother.

It is strange that so many mothers in our modern society do not realize what their part really is. It would surely be one of the clearest indicatons of affection and concern that the mother should be at home when the children return from school. There is a great deal of talk about love for children, but it too often resolves itself into giving them money, or expensive toys (for which they usually care little after the first few weeks.) But this is no substitute for the mother's welcome at home, and her interest in all that they have been doing.

Why is it that so many mothers are restless and unsatisfied with their home life? Why is it that, instead of finding their main interests and occupation there, they keenly feel that they are deprived of their right to engage in business as well as the men? No one can do both jobs successfully, a business career and the mother of a family. It would seem to the onlooker that, in this case, the home is immensely more important and rewarding.

* * *

The character of the Social Climate can be illustrated from a very different angle, that of actual crime. Last October an article appeared in one of our high-class weekly magazines written by a well-known American psychologist (Dr. Karl Menninger), entitled, Punishment Is Crime. The argument was that punishment of a criminal was an evil, or at least mistaken, thing, and was inflicted simply owing to the lust for vengeance which lies in every human heart. We should therefore substitute for it a far more sympathetic understanding, and far more attention to his rehabilitation by psychiatric and other means.

It is difficult to know how to seriously treat this argument which seems to run clean contrary to the facts. We have in the Anglo-Saxon lands for the last 30 years, been doing our utmost to mitigate the severities of the penal laws, from the abolition of the death penalty to the substitution of psychiatric treatment for former more drastic methods. The results are now plain to see; an immense increase, year after year, of open violent crimes of all sorts. Do sensible people believe that still further development of this philosophy in the Social Climate is going to succeed, when up to date it has notoriously failed?

* * *

There is only one practical cure for the crime wave which threatens to destroy many of the great cities of North America. What is that? A return to more severe laws and harsher penalties? A police state? No, neither of these — but a change in the social opinion, i.e., all our minds, yours and mine, to a belief in the necessity and respect for authority, and the firm enforcement of just and moderate laws, in home, school, university, and society. And of this change, we repeat, the first stage must be in the life of the family home, in other words, in the minds of the parents.

Seen from the East

Mr. Bennett's B.C.

From The Telegram, Toronto

PREMIER W. A. C. Bennett has been in power 17 years in British Columbia and in that time a once-disorganized and uncertain province has become one of the most prosperous communities in North America.

Premier Bennett seeks a new mandate on August 27. On the basis of his economic record he is entitled to win it.

Mr. Bennett is not by any means a perfect provincial leader, but rather displays many of the overtones of overt authoritarianism which plague Premier Smallwood in his fiefdom of Newfoundland.

The simple fact is that these once raw and potentially rich outreaches of Canada cannot be developed by men who cannot make big decisions, who are not super-salesmen and who cannot move fast to solve the huge problems of human and economic under-development. No one could accuse Premier Bennett of defaulting in any of these key areas.

* * *

When he said some of the intellectuals and technocrats in Ottawa couldn't operate a peanut stand, he was right. In B.C. they needed a leader who thinks and builds like a pharaoh. Before Mr. Bennett overthrew the chaotic coalition government which manhandled B.C. in the late 40s and early 50s, nothing in B.C. seemed to work. The Pacific Great Eastern Railway went nowhere, carried little freight. Coastal transport vital to maritime trade operated at the whim of eastern railways companies.

Driving in the B.C. interior in the late 40s was like making one's way around modern Bolivia. Bennett spent the first half of his years in power making British Columbia institutions work properly for British Columbians. He built new boats to fit the needs of coastal tourism and trade in B.C. shipyards waiting on an indifferent Ottawa for new subsidies.

He pushed the staggering provincial debt, which he augmented, on to Crown corporations such as the ferry services, and the new toll authority which had steady sources of revenue against which debt could be written off.

Trade followed Bennett's modernization. The reality of operation, a west coast phenomenon of the 60s, followed. Today Japan is second only to the United States as a major direct investor in B.C.'s prosperity.

* * *

Undoubtedly Premier Bennett will reply to a rejuvenating and determined NDP with the "socialistic" measures he has implemented as a so-called "free enterprise" political leader. These include a widening of the hospital insurance scheme instituted in 1951, nationalization of the B.C. Electric in 1961 and the major role of provincial Crown corporations in transport, tourism, the interior economic development of this vast province.

Bennett's image in Eastern Canada is bad. He gives the impression at constitutional conferences of having only simple and unworkable answers to the problems of Confederation.

Almost total indifference to the rights of Quebec, hostility to such devices as the Official Languages Bill and a long yawn where constitutional change is concerned, are partly B.C., as well as Bennett attitudes. This is deplorable from such a rich, important part of Canada.

* * *

The NDP, fresh from their victory in Manitoba, will be after Bennett's scalp as never before, which is saying something for B.C. where ideological differences are historically deep. The sharp cleavages between left and right of depression days have lingered in B.C. politics.

Even with their recent Prairie victory and confidence, the NDP will have to work very hard indeed to disprove the Bennett record and offer affluent British Columbians a better deal than his for the 1970s.

U.S. Surplus Stock Growing

Wheat War Near

From Reuters

Official sources in Washington said Friday hopes are rapidly dwindling that a world wheat price war can be averted.

Such a showdown, they fear, would premanently damage the already fragile International Grains Arrangement.

The U.S. has a greater stock of surplus wheat than any of the other major world suppliers. Officials here said the U.S. may be forced to strike a fatal blow at the IGA because the wheat crisis is as bad as it was a month ago when the U.S. called top officials from other major exporters to Washington to search for a solution within the IGA's structure.

Events of the last month have shown that a meeting of representatives from the U.S., Canada, Australia, Argentina, and the European Common Market failed to produce a workable solution.

Subsequent actions supposedly based on agreements reached at the meeting have generated recrimination and unscheduled counter-actions by others, particularly the European Common Market.

Price reductions by the U.S. and Canada— declared by them to have been approved at the meeting — brought protest, agreement-breaking charges and, fairly speedily, retaliatory price cuts by the ECM.

From the U.S. standpoint, not only has the ECM action negated the benefits derived from its own price reductions but in many of its prime selling areas has left U.S. prices in a worse competitive position than before it took its so-called "price corrective" action.

Moreover, because of alleged side agreements with competitors such as the ECM, the U.S. price cuts were confined to selected markets only, primarily Western Europe.

That led to charges of discrimination from buyers who were overlooked, including two of the biggest customers for U.S. wheat — Japan and Brazil. Both have refused to buy any U.S. wheat since the price adjustments were made July 18.

Japan, the biggest cash buyer of U.S. wheat, has adamantly declared it will buy no more from the U.S. until the U.S. does lower its prices. It backed up that declaration by announcing Friday a new wheat buying policy, throwing open its market, starting next week, to all comers providing their price was acceptable.

Officials here are uncertain just when and in what shape the next U.S. move will be. They do concede however that something will have to be done very soon.

A disastrous year last season, when U.S. exports slumped to their lowest point in a decade, left surplus stocks when the new season started July 1 at an embarrassing four-year high of 810,600,000 bushels, 34 per cent more than a year earlier.

Apart from raising an official dilemma about how much the acreage permitted to be sown to wheat for 1970 harvest should be cut back — a decision which already is running nearly two months late — grumblings for action from outside the administration are rapidly turning into expressions bordering on disgust.

With U.S. wheat exports in the first month of the new season already running well behind last year's poor results, exporters are asking how much "lost business" does Washington consider sufficient to warrant some action.

Frustration over what officials and traders alike describe as a "stalemate" situation already is being echoed in the U.S. Senate, where last week Senator Jack Miller (Rep.—Iowa) renewed demands for U.S. withdrawal from the IGA.

It is apparent that, from the administration's standpoint, it would prefer the U.S. not to have to make the next move.

Observers in Washington feel, however, that at the rate pressure for action is mounting, preferences, like some agreements, may have to be placed aside, especially when the circumstances in which they were conceived have completely changed.

New Figures Due On Branch Lines?

CP, from Ottawa

New cost and loss figures on 53 branch lines the railways claim are uneconomic may be submitted to the Canadian Transport Commission as the result of a commission ruling Friday.

The commission's railway committee issued orders setting more specific rules for railway accounting of operating and imbedded expenses.

The railways are to submit new costing manuals within 30 days, based on the commission's orders. Opponents will be given a chance to state their views on the manuals before they are approved.

The orders, backed by a 50,000-word statement of reasons, are an attempt to put an end to arguments that began in the late 1950s before the royal commission on transportation headed by the late M. A. MacPherson.

The argument between the railways and other interested parties — the provinces, municipalities and principal shippers — was over the proper methods of accounting for expenses involved in operating short branch lines as part of nation-wide railway networks.

Most of the branches the railways want to abandon are in Western Canada and run for 25 to 35 miles each.

The committee concluded, after lengthy hearings last year and months of intensive study by a special committee of technical experts, that there is a difference between the costs incurred in operating a branch line which is abandoned because of operating losses, and the costs incurred in continuing to operate the same line under a subsidy.

The commission has powers under the 1967 National Transportation Act to authorize abandonment or a subsidy to keep a line operating in the public interest.

The railways now receive general subsidies on an annually-declining scale. For 1969, they receive $82,000,000, but this will drop by $14,000,000 next year.

By next year, the specific subsidies for which they qualify may rise to that amount, whereupon the general subsidies will end.

The commission's costing formula is not as generous as the railways fought for in last year's hearings. However, it is unlikely to make dramatic change in any of the 53 applications which have been pending for three years.

If that is found to be the case, the commission then has to decide whether the line should be abandoned or continued under a subsidy. It also has to decide what subsidy should be paid.

The commission ruled, in effect, that there are different depreciation costs that could be allowed when a branch line is abandoned, as opposed to continuing under a subsidy.

It ruled that when a line or service is continued under a subsidy, the railway should be compensated for a return on the cost of the capital that might otherwise be salvaged if it were abandoned, and for a return on any new investment that might have to be made to maintain the service.

It decided that the rate of return for the Canadian Pacific should be "no lower than the composite embedded rate" of interest paid on CP's outstanding debt, and that the same rate should be applied to the Canadian National for all costing purposes under the Railway Act.

Of the 53 pending applications before the commission, 46 involve 1,517 miles in Western Canada, and seven involve 144 miles in Nova Scotia and Ontario. The CN and CP have a combined national mileage of about 43,000.

When the railways submit new or revised applications for permission to abandon lines, they will be required under the new rules to submit detailed figures on traffic revenues and costs — fugures that will have to comply with the new formula, and that will be made public.

After Interior Tour

McGeer Sees Snowball for Grits

ELECTION '69

CP, from Vancouver

Liberal leader Pat McGeer has returned here after two weeks of campaigning in the Interior, claiming the Grits will win more than the 20 seats he has predicted in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

Dr. McGeer said his tour of the Interior has shown him that Liberal organizations in ridings virtually written off two weeks ago now are fighting to win.

"We are going to come back and hit very hard at these swing ridings," he said. "These seats are now so much in the fight I think we are going to win them."

He named Okanagan North and Shuswap, which he visited twice, as two such ridings. Minister Without Portfolio Pat Jordan held Okanagan North in the last House and Social Credit's Willis Jefcoat held Shuswap.

Dr. McGeer said his new-found confidence comes from reports he receives daily from constituency organizations and by the enthusiastic reception he says he gets while mainstreeting.

"This is no longer just a handshake and a polite hello. Now there are smiles and waves and people are telling me all the time they hope we will win."

Scott

Independent Granddad Runs as Voice of Youth

Victoria's "lighthouse philospher," Bill Scott, has thrown his hat into the provincial election, and will contest the Socred-held riding of Victoria as an independent.

Running on a campaign platform of the "voice for youth," the 71-year-old grandfather of five says a country is "only as good as its students and teachers."

★ ★ ★

"I feel present-day Canada belongs to its youth and it should have a bigger voice in Canada than it has at the present time," Mr. Scott said on announcing his candidacy.

Asked if he were a serious candidate, Mr. Scott said "certainly I am interested in winning . . . I'll be the mouthpiece for youth . . . I've always been a serious candidate . . ."

Mr. Scott, who has carried his ideas — ranging from an "intellectual Olympic Games to a Maple Leaf Guard matching China's Red Guard — across Canada and to many of Britain's universities, calls himself an Anglo-Chinese-Canadian. He spent 22 years in China as a lighthouse keeper and has lived the past 23 years in Victoria.

Mr Scott has run in so many elections he can't remember them all, and his face is as well known as his aphorisms.

Skillings Lashes Ottawa Designation

Kootenays Incentives 'Breach of Faith'

The federal government was accused Friday by Trade Minister Waldo Skillings of a breach of faith in designating a section of southeastern B.C. as eligible for incentives to attract new industry.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Skillings said he discussed the matter with Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand in Ottawa some six weeks ago and told him B.C. felt all sections should be treated equally.

★ ★ ★

"It was my impression that there would be no designated areas as such, at least until after further consultation with the provinces. Now they have unilaterally made a decision that in my books is just as bad as the previous one which designated the Okanagan an area to receive federal incentives.

★ ★ ★

"We believe that each and every part oof the provinoe should have the same chance for federal incentives based upon the merits of its case."

The minister added: "Why shouldn't the Cariboo, Prince Rupert or Terrace or Campbell River, for that matter, not receive the same incentives that the federal government is willing to give to new industry to locate in the Kootenays?"

Soviet Skippers Fined, Cheered

While the position fixes taken by Second Officer Raymond Maratos on the Howay placed the Soviets at 9.7 miles offshore, or 2.3 miles inside Canadian waters, the Soviet captain said his own position fix placed him 1.1 miles from the spot marked on the Howay's charts, still 1.2 miles inside the Canadian limit.

Lawyer Harold Dean of Vancouver, representing the Soviet captains, said there was no question as to the ships being in Canadian waters, but added that he hoped to show they were there unwillingly.

Chief Officer Victor Sankov of the Kouzachin testified he was in charge of the bridge at 5 a.m. and was setting the trawl about 1.5 miles outside Canadian waters when the net did not move out as intended, but remained beneath his ship.

The Kouzachin was in danger of wrapping the net about its propellers if it tried moving forward, he said. Over the next two hours the two Soviet vessels tried to get out of the predicament by transferring lines and performing manoeuvres.

An onshore current and undertow he was not familiar which caused the ships to drift at a rate of about three knots, he said. Sankov said his problems were compounded by the fact his vessel had no clutch, which meant manoeuvres were constantly slowed by the need to turn engines off each time he wanted to reverse or go forward.

The crown, represented by Victoria lawyer R. B. Hutchison, established that no distress signals were flown, however, even though the flags were available on the ships.

Judge Ostler asked Sankov why, as given in earlier testimony, he had waited until 7:20 a.m. before calling Capt. Morozov. The chief officer said he had not felt the ship itself was in any danger, in spite of the troubles he was experiencing.

After a recess called by Judge Ostler, the court resumed shortly after 4 p.m. with a statement from the defence. Mr. Dean said he had planned to call more witnesses, but was afraid the case would be adjourned to Monday. He said each day in port cost his clients from $3,000 to $5,000, and they could not afford a weekend adjournment.

Judge Ostler said he could offer no sympathy, as he had not been consulted as to court arrangements.

In his summation, Mr. Dean said it was unfortunate the ships had drifted into Canadian waters, but it was the result of troubles experienced. He argued that the accused were not guilty of fishing as there were no fish in the net when it was drawn in, and no fish in the holds when the trawlers were inspected in Victoria. The Soviets had only been concerned with getting their net untangled and out of Canadian waters, he added, not with fishing.

Mr. Hutchison argued that the definition of the act of fishing covered any attempt to fish, whether successful or not, and commenced from the moment the line or net was placed in the water. The accused admitted they were in Canadian waters, he added, and had obviously been preparing to fish.

In passing sentence, Judge Ostler said the master of the Kouzachin should have been called to the bridge earlier. He said he found it hard not to believe the real reason he was called was because of the arrival of the Howay on the scene.

"It is a master's duty to assure the bridge is in capable, experienced hands when he leaves it," he said. The ship was "too close to Canadian waters to allow for any difficulties," he added, and the trouble experienced had not been an act of God but the result of maritime immaturity on the part of the chief officer.

Trudeau's Conference

Cost Cuts Wednesday?

CP, from Ottawa

Prime Minister Trudeau has scheduled a news conference for next Wednesday evening and there is speculation he will use the occasion to announce government spending cuts.

Trudeau told a news conference last Wednesday major cuts in government spending can be expected next month. He said the cabinet intends that government departments, and not the taxpayers, should feel the effects of inflation.

In its examination, the cabinet has devoted special attention to public works programs to ensure that only necessary projects are undertaken. All cabinet ministers were reported to have been told to make exhaustive studies of departmental estimates with a view to recommending cuts.

There is also widespread speculation that the cabinet will recommend staff reductions in certain public service establishments. Sources say this would take the form of extending the present program of not filling all vacancies as they occur.

★ ★ ★

The sources say the current review of the government's social welfare program — including family allowances — is not directly associated with the plan to cut spending. The welfare review is mainly concerned with the efficiency and effectiveness of various programs.

Hectic Rush to Buy

Franc Devaluation Gives Golds a Boost

TORONTO (CP)—Golds posted their largest daily advance on record reacting to the news that the French franc will be devalued.

After being fairly inactive during the first five hours of trading, the gold index jumped 28.26 points in the last half hour after the announcement to close at 194.18, up 29.2 points on the day.

Among gold stocks, Dome Mines rose 6 to 57, Campbell Red Lake 5⅝ to 25, Giant Yellowknife 2⅞ to 12, Camflo 85 cents to $5.90, Bralorne 40 cents to $3.25 and Upper Canada 20 cents to $3.05.

Volume continued light with 1,582,000 shares traded compared with 1,989,000 Thursday. The market closed fractionally higher despite dull trading.

Fall in Bata

VANCOUVER — A sharp fall in United Bata highlighted trade in the oil group. It was off .85 at 8.65, in a generally lower market.

Losers among mines were Buttle, off .40, Silver Arrow, off .30, Silver City off .20, Davis Keays off .25, Casino off .18, and Consolidated Rexspar off .30.

Gains were recorded in Adanac, Agassiz, Arctic, Utica and Western Mines.

Driver dropped .25 to 3.45 among industrials but Dawson was up ⅝ at 6.00 and Fields rose ½ to 10.

Mines Advance

MONTREAL (CP)—An excited rush to buy mines after news of the franc's devaluation had little effect on most other prices as the market closed a bit firmer. Trading generally was light. Papers edged ahead of industrials to lead gains while banks were weakest.

In banks, Commerce dropped ¼ to 18⅞, Royal ⅛ to 19⅝ and Nova Scotia ⅛ to 22 while Toronto-Dominion rose ¼ to 19 and Canadienne Nationale ⅛ to 11¼.

Among industrials, Rothmans picked up 1 to 20⅛ after reporting increased profits. Falconbridge Nickel, gained 1¼ to 129½ and International Nickel ⅝ to 37½. Wajax was up 1¼ to 11 and Popular Industries 1¼ to 6½. Alcan slipped ½ to 28. Southam Press declined 2 to 58. Freiman 2 to 5½ and Dofasco ⅝ to 20⅛.

Loss at New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Turning in another sluggish performance, the stock market drifted through much of the session before closing with a small loss.

Goodyear Tire was the most active issue, off 1⅛ at 26¾. Natomas, which bounced 10 Thursday, was second most-active, off 1⅝ at 81.

Xerox lost 1⅛ at 95. IBM was off ¼ at 333½; Control Data, up ⅛ at 149⅝; and Polaroid, off ¼ at 122½. Steels mostly were lower.

Market Expects Lower Prices

The devaluation of the French franc Friday evening took the world's stock markets by surprise, and most of the stock exchanges were already closed before the announcement was made.

Among the few still open were the Montreal and Toronto exchanges which close later than the New York market, and the immediate effect there was a hectic scramble to purchase gold shares.

The Toronto gold index jumped 29.26 points as speculators took a chance on it that the French action might trigger off another move to upgrade the price of gold.

STOCK PRICES

"One would expect a general lowering of stock prices early next week," said one local investment dealer. "That is the normal pattern after a major currency is devalued, but by the time the weekend is over excitement may have calmed down to make the effect minimal."

In taking just over a tenth off the value of the franc the French government may have eased the situation with the German mark and the main fear will be the ability of the pound sterling to maintain its levels.

One money market man said the signing of the paper gold agreement would be useful in stabilizing sterling and other currencies. The new Special Drawing Rights provided under the international monetary fund agreement are designed to meet situations just of the sort created by the devaluation of the franc.

Canada is not a large international trader with France but a number of French firms have considerable capital investments in Canada, and the devaluation will make them more valuable and important than ever.

NO SALES

At Montreal where the pound sterling was up 3-16th at $2.58 before the announcement, no sales took place after the change was made to the franc.

CPI PROFITS UP

A 7-per-cent increase in net income is reported by Canadian Pacific Investments for the first half of 1969.

The investment climb of Canadian Pacific Railways, CPI made $24,057,000 (43 cents a share) against $22,726,000 (40 cents) in the corresponding period a year ago.

CPI said Cominco's earnings were adversely affected by an oversupply of fertilizer and by severe weather conditions early in the year.

Before de Gaulle

Old Franc Almost Worthless

PARIS (UPI)—When Charles de Gaulle came to power in 1958, the French franc was virtually worthless.

It exchanged for two-tenths of one cent and had been devalued seven times since the Second World War by the Fourth Republic.

Upon assuming the presidency and creating the Fifth Republic, de Gaulle also created the new franc. The new franc was worth 100 of the old francs, or 20 cents on exchange markets.

Throughout his years as president of France, de Gaulle fought to keep the value of the franc at 20 cents. Three months after he left office, it fell to 17.5 cents.

De Gaulle had called devaluation of the franc as "the worst absurdity." President Georges Pompidou termed it "inevitable" and announced the decision Friday night at the end of a two-hour emergency cabinet meeting.

Bids Made By 126 For Homes

Victoria has already received 126 applications from people wanting to live in the Rose-Blanshard low cost housing development, city manager Dennis Young said Friday.

The project, now being built, will have 184 housing units. Some are expected to be ready for occupancy before the end of the year.

Mr. Young said the name selected for the development is Blanshard Court.

Handley Page

Broke Aircraft Builder Launches Rescue Try

LONDON (Reuters) — Handley Page Ltd., Britain's oldest independent aircraft builders, Friday announced it has run out of money but is launching a big financial rescue operation with possible American backing.

The company, founded 60 years ago by British aircraft pioneer Frederick Handley Page, recently borrowed £6,000,000 ($15,000,000) from a British bank.

But it now reports that it does not have "the necessary resources available to carry on any longer in its present form."

A statement said it is negotiating with the American-based International Jetstream Corp. with a view to forming a new company.

The American company has an exclusive arrangement to market Handley Page turboprop Jet Stream executive aircraft and it was hoped International Jetstream would inject £4,500,000 into the new company.

Estimates put the total Handley Page debt to its creditors at about £13,000,000, including the £6,000,000 bank loan.

A spokesman for Handley Page's financial advisers said that, should the projected deal with the U.S. company not materialize, none of the shareholders or creditors would get any money.

Cox Adds 68 to Opening 66 For Three-Stroke CPGA Lead

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob Cox of Richmond opened up a three-stroke lead in the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship Friday by carding a four-under par 68 for a 36-hole total of 134.

A terror on the greens Thursday, Balding had some putting troubles en route to his 71.

SHARE THIRD

Sharing third place at 140 were Bob Panasiuk of Tecumseh, Ont., and Ron Willey, assistant-pro at Vancouver's Marine Drive Club. Panasiuk shot a 71 Friday while the steady Willey carded a second successive 70.

Stan Homeniuk of Dauphin and Alvie Thompson of Thornhill, Ont., both matched Cox' round to reach the half-way mark of the $33,157 tournament at 141.

Also at 141 were Phil Giroux of Montreal and Doug Reid of Vancouver, who had second-round 70s, and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., who shot a 69.

"I was in a trap on two, buried the club in the sand and just got the ball out, "Knudson said. Then I put it in the bunker on eight and left it there for a double bogey. I three-putted on 11 and again on 12.

"I've only made one putt in 36 holes, and that was yesterday."

But Knudson ddin't have as much trouble as Neil Green, who started off with a 68 on Thursday. The Calgary pro shot himself out of any reasonable chance to be a contender with an 80.

MISSED SHORT ONE

Cox, who couldn't get anything down from more than eight feet Friday, started off with birdies on the first two holes. But he three-putted the par-five third hole, missing from less than a foot.

He got into trouble again on the 11th but an exceptional recovery was probably the turning point in his round.

COULDN'T SEE GREEN

"I couldn't see the green and I had to stand about a foot and a half below the ball," he said. "I had to cut the shot with a five iron to get around it, but I got it on."

The ball actually landed on a finger of the green and Cox had to chip over a fairway island to get at the pin. He punched the ball four feet short and while he missed the putt, he thankfully accepted the bogey five.

DISCARDED DRIVER

Balding discarded his driver early for the second time. He had the shaft patched up but hooked badly on two of his first three tee shots and again went the rest of the way using his No. 3 wood.

Balding three putted the ninth green and after taking a bogey on the 13th, three-putted again, from less than 20 feet, on the 11th for a double bogey.

"I wasn't struggling, I was just sort of staggering," he commented ruefully.

Panasiuk had trouble with the par-five holes, taking bogeys on the third and 18th, where he gambled on reaching the green after a hooked tee shot and put his ball in muddy rough beside a pond to the right of the green.

Bill Wakeham of Victoria remained as the Vancouver Island entrant with the best chance of getting one of the bigger cash awards. He shot a par 72 for a 143.

Montreal Hopes Dimmed

TORONTO (CP) — The National Football League will not expand into Canada "in the foreseeable future," United States professional football commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday in a telephone interview with CTV sports director John Esaw.

Rozelle, who called the foreseeable future at least five years, said Montreal has expressed interest in obtaining an NFL franchise, but the NFL is not interested in shifting a franchise to Canada.

Island Crew Wins in Italy

NAPLES, Italy (CP)—Shawnigan Lake School Rowing Club's eight won the 'little finals' here Friday in the International Rowing Federation juniors regatta.

The 'little finals' were for crews ousted early from major competition. Grant Bestwick of Shawnigan was fourth in the singles sculls.

Red Bats Continue to Boom

Juan Marichal said the other day he wouldn't mind being traded to Cincinnati Reds.

The San Francisco right-hander said he would ask for a $200,000 contract if it happened, but added that he wouldn't take a penny if he didn't win 30 games.

It was his way of paying homage to the most-powerful batting attack in recent major-league baseball history.

ON BATTING RAMPAGE

Short of calibre pitching, the Reds have pounded their way into the Western Division lead in the National League. They have a team batting average of almost .290, have scored more runs than any club in either league and their home-run total if already more than 20 above last year's total.

The Reds, whose batting order includes five players in the top 10 in their league and a sixth only a few points away, hit five home runs Friday night in demolishing Philadelphia Phillies, 12-5, on the strenth of two five-run innings.

They started modestly enough with Alex Johnson hitting a bases-empty homer in the first inning and Ted Savate connecting for a second run in the third.

CONSECUTIVE HOMERS

Lee May and Johnny Bench hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning and Pete Rose homered in the seventh inning during the second five-run burst.

Victory moved the Reds a half game ahead of Atlanta Braves, who split a double header with New York Mets, winning, 1-0, in 10 innings on a bases-loaded single by Felipe Alou after losing, 1-4.

Jerry Koosman had a shutout in the opener until Bob Tillman hit a two-out, ninth-inning home run.

San Francisco's third-place Giants slipped a game and a half off the pace by losing, 3-4, to St. Louis Cardinals, who got six-hit pitching from rookie Chuck Taylor and a game-deciding double from Tim McCarver.

Los Angeles Dodgers remained two games away from the Braves, ending a Chicago Cub win streak at seven games with a 5-0 victory fashioned behind the two-hit pitching of Bill Singer.

Houston Astros, in fifth place but trailing by only four and a half games, ended a four-game losing streak with a 5-2 win over Montreal Expos.

OAKLAND GAINS

In the American League, Oakland Athletics crept within a game and a half of Minnesota Twins in the Western Division.

Athletics scored three times in the 10th inning to defeat New York Yankees, 5-3, in the first game of a doubleheader. They lost the second when Al Downing, going the distance for the first time this season, shut them out, 5-0, on a four-hitter.

But it meant a gain when Baltimore Orioles scored four times in the ninth inning to take the Twins, 6-5.

Basketball Leagues Study 'Cooperative Arrangement'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Presidents of the two U.S. professional basketball leagues issued a carefully worded statement Friday announcing they are exploring the possibility of a "co-operative arrangement" between the two.

The word "merger" was not used in the short, two-paragraph statement, but the release followed by only 10 days a report in the Los Angeles Times that the National Basketball Association and American Basketball Association would merge within 30 days.

"The form of such arrangements have not been agreed upon but it is hoped they will be shaped to conform to the needs of the various cities in the leagues, as well as to any applicable law," NBA-commissioner Walter Kennedy and ABA-commissioner James Gardner said in the joint statement.

The ABA, which has struggled through poor attendance in most of its 11 league cities through its only two seasons, has sought constantly a mutual player draft or an all-star game with the NBA, if not a merger itself.

Red Lion Wins Tourney Opener

Mel Nelson pitched a three-hitter as Red Lion Inn defeated Victoria Luckies, 4-1, Friday in the opening game of the B.C. senior "A" men's softball championship tournament at Central Park.

Given a three-run cushion in the second inning, Nelson allowed Luckies their only run in the third inning when he walked Roy St. Denis and Larry Montgomery, the first two batters he faced. St. Denis scored on a fielder's choice. Nelson had another wild streak in the last inning, walking two more before Mike Rye came in to retire the last three batters.

Play continues today starting at 8 a.m. with Trail and Johnston Motors of Vancouver playing in the first of 14 games.

Strawberry Cup Race . . . . . . at Western Tonight

Al Smith Returns to Speedway

Roy told his 32-year-old elder brother to go ahead if he thought he could do the job in tonight's Strawberry Cup race.

And so for the second time in as many seasons, the exciting Victoria driver will end his "retirement."

He will pilot Roy's No. 7 car in an attempt to capture the Strawberry Cup for the third time.

"That will be a tough one to try and come back in," said owner Vantreight.

"There will be a bunch of hot dog racers out there but we are sure Alan can do the job. He's one of the most exciting drivers ever to race here and he's been keeping in touch and going to all the races."

While a victory in the Strawberry Cup would be most satisfactory, the race Al really wants to win is the Daffodil Cup event on the Labor Day weekend.

"Al has never won the Daffodil," said Vantreight. "But he's led it for more laps than anybody else since we put up the cup. He'll drive Albert's No. 8 car this year.

"He hoped to take the Daffodil last year and started out promisingly with a victory in the Tony Slogarth Memorial at Nanaimo, but Roy got the big one."

Cars from Seattle, Prince George and the Canadian American Modified Racing Association circuit will be competing with local drivers in the 50-lap Strawberry Cup event.

In addition Saturday, super stocks will have a 25-lap main event in the joint program which starts with time trials at 7 p.m. and the first race at 8:00.

Carnarvon Continues Defence of Crown

The Oak Bay club, B.C. champions in eight of the last 10 years, reached the final of the six-team, double-knockout final Friday by defeating previously-unbeaten Terrace, 13-2, Friday night at Carnarvon Park.

In earlier games Friday, Kennedy got no-hit pitching from Mike LaHaise in eliminating Parksville, 13-1, and Little Mountain eliminated North Coquitlam, 13-8, by scoring seven runs in the sixth inning.

WILD ACTION

It was a wild day of baseball. Kennedy broke it open by scoring eight runs in the third inning on only two hits. Six bases on balls, three errors and 12 stolen bases did most of the damage.

Little Mountain got 12 hits but benefited hugely from 11 bases on balls and four errors.

Carnarvons had a lot of trouble with Gerry Deane, who allowed only five hits and struck out the side three times in a 13-strikeout performance. But Deane walked six batters, hit one and uncorked a wild pitch as Carnarvons scored four runs in the second inning with only two hits, got two runs without a hit in the third and five runs with only one hit in the sixth.

BOLAND HOMERS

Play continues today with Kennedy and Little Mountain playing at 2 p.m. and the winner taking on Terrace at 6 p.m.

The survivor, who will need to win two games, qualifies to meet Carnarvon on Sunday.

Harvey, Hemming Tops in Baseball

Manager Barry Harvey of Transport Workers has won the Senior Amateur Baseball League batting championship.

Official statistics released Friday show Harvey with a .344 batting average on 31 hits in 90 at bat. He edged out Gary Lawrence of Independents, who had 27 hits in 79 at bats, by two points.

Mike McAvoy (.320), Bob Mabee (.315), John McKeachie (.300) and Terry Whitman (.291) of Transport Workers also finished in the top 10 hitters but it wasn't enough to beat out Greaves for the league championship.

ONLY ONE LOSS

Greaves did it with pitching. George Hemming led the league with 8-1, Les Brice was next with 3-2 and Rick Cook won seven of nine decisions for a combined 23-5 record.

The four-team playoff starts today at Royal Athletic Park with Greaves playing Independents at 2 p.m. in one best-of-three semi-final.

Transport Workers and Gorge Hotel start their semi-final on Sunday at 2. Play continues on a daily basis Monday with one game each night at 6:30 until the finalists have been decided.

The best-of-seven final starts next Saturday.

Hockey Canada Picks Houle To Direct National Team

TORONTO (CP) — Buck Houle, who has been associated with the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League ever since he played as a bantam in the Toronto Marlboro organization, has been appointed to succeed Hap Emms as general manager of Hockey Canada.

The appointment was announced Friday by Charles Hay of Toronto, Hockey Canada president, about 24 hours after Emms announced his resignation from the organization which operates the Canadian national team.

HIGHLY RECOMMENDED

"Mr. Houle was strongly recommended to Hockey Canada by the two professional clubs — Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens — who are represented on our board," Hay said.

Houle played junior "A" hockey with Toronto British Consuls, coached by Joe Primeau. After returning from overseas wartime service, he was appointed office manager of Major Conn Smythe's construction business and also became associated with Maple Leaf Gardens, also owned by Smythe.

VARIOUS CAPACITIES

He coached the junior "B" Weston Dukes, served as a trouble-shooter for Toronto Maple Leafs and subsequently spent three years in Victoria as general manager of the Toronto-sponsored Western Hockey League club.

Returning to Toronto after the Maple Leafs sold their WHL franchise to Phoenix, the 52-year-old Houle was a co-ordinator of activities for the Toronto Marlboros and recently was named as a scout for the Maple Leafs.

Newcombe Stages Rally To Reach Tennis Semis

TORONTO (CP) — Top-seeded John Newcombe of Butch Buckholtz of St. Louis Friday reached the semi-finals of the men's singles in the Canadian Open tennis championships.

Newcombe had to come from behind to eliminate Pancho Guzman, 22-year-old entrant from Ecuador, 9-7, 4-6, 0-6, 6-4, 6-3. Guzman had a 3-0 lead in the fourth set before Newcombe got his game under control again.

Buckholtz also had to go five sets, defeating Australian Dick Crealey, 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 2-6, 6-0 in a match interrupted by rain on Thursday.

Meeting in the other semi-final are second-seeded Cliff Richey of the U.S. and Mike Belkin, Canadian close champion, who was seeded seventh.

The women's singles final will be an all-Canadian affair. Top-seeded Faye Urgan of Windsor advanced Friday with a 6-3,6-0 win over Jake Schiffman of New York while second-seeded Vicki Berner of Vancouver took out Andree Martin of Montreal, 6-2, 6-1.

NOTTINGHAM, England (Reuters) — England batsmen John Edrich and Phil Sharpe mauled the New Zealand attack with an unbroken second-wicket stand of 225 in the second cricket test at Trent Bridge Friday.

Oak Bay Election Corner

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

The predominant local issue which caused me to run in this election is the hospital problem. While the overall problem is complex, one vital fact has a simple solution. The gravest part of the problem is the shortage of acute beds. Those are the beds being used for the treatment of the patient at the most serious phase of his illness, usually at the onset, as in acute appendicitis, perforation of an ulcer, internal hemorrhage, or the first few days after elective surgery. From initial planning to final creation of acute bed wards, takes a long time, usually years. The acute bed is unavoidably expensive to construct, requires all the associated modern expensive equipment so vital for proper patient care, is served by the most highly trained nursing staff, and is expensive to operate. The simple but serious flaw in our use of acute beds lies in the fact that the patient is kept in that same expensive bed long after he has passed the most critical point in his illness, and when he could be given perfectly efficient and adequate care in a simpler, less expensive type of bed, namely a POST-ACUTE BED. The post-acute beds could be built much faster, at less expense and would be less costly to operate. I advocate the speedy provision of post-acute beds which in large measure would solve our serious problem in relatively short order. More of this tomorrow.

WALLACE, Scott G. X

You are looking at the romantic lead of a big new Hollywood picture. (Please, no autographs.)

Why would a big film studio want to make a movie star out of the Bug?

Why not?

Its services cost only $1898.* That's less than they have to pay other movie stars in a single day.

Once signed up, the Bug won't suddenly start making crazy demands. (A gallon of gas for every 32 miles or so is all.)

No studio could ask for a less temperamental star. (It'll work any time, anywhere and in any weather.)

Or one with fewer bad habits. (It doesn't even drink water.)

Or one that ages so gracefully.

Nixon Primes Welfare Bomb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon offered the U.S. Friday night a far-reaching and costly reform of the welfare system which would assure a family income to the working poor or those who are jobless but willing to work.

The chief executive went on radio and television and — reading a speech which represented weeks of effort and five months of consultations within his administration — spelled out a $4-billion-a-year program to replace a welfare system which he called "a colossal failure."

His plan would scrap the 35-year-old system which caused husbands to abandon their homes so their families could become eligible for welfare payments and which caused the migration of thousands of Negroes from the South to more generous northern cities.

In his speech, Nixon described "the new federalism" — the label he apparently has decided to attach to his administration just as president Franklin Roosevelt, under whom welfare came into being, called his government "the new deal."

The national welfare rights organization, which said it represented 75,000 welfare recipients in 167 cities, called "inadequate" Nixon's plan for a $1,600 a year income for any family of four in which the head of the household was willing to work. It said the minimum should be "at least $5,500."

In addition to the overhaul of welfare, the president promised to send Congress next week from his summer White House in San Clemente, Calif., messages outlining these additional reforms:

● A no-strings-attached system of federal sharing of its tax collections with the states and localities, to start small with $500,000,000 in 1971.

● A regrouping and renovation of the government's job training efforts, at an additional cost of $600,000,000 a year, with child care centres established to allow welfare mothers to take work. The state would exercise more authority while getting more federal funds.

● An unprecedented nationwide minimum for families receiving government help, designed to slow the migration of Negroes from the rural South to big northern states with more generous welfare payments.

● Comparable nationwide welfare minimums for the aged, the blind and the disabled at an additional cost of $400,000,000 a year.

None of these innovations could possibly take effect before January, 1970.

MANY FATHERS

Under AFDC, many fathers deserted their wives and children so their families could become eligible for welfare.

That would be abolished under Nixon's plan, as would the system under which there is no floor for welfare payments in the various states. That condition has sent thousands of rural, poor Negroes to the big cities in the north, where payments have been larger.

The president's proposal would establish the federal floor of $1,600 for a family of four and $300 a year more for each additional member of the family.

IN 20 STATES

In 20 states, Nixon said, "those in which poverty is most widespread," welfare payments now are below that $1,600 figure. For those states, the new federal minimum "would mean a leap upward for many thousand of families that cannot care for themselves," he said.

Welfare payments now vary from $39 a month in Mississippi — the lowest — to $263 a month in New Jersey — the highest.

The amount that Washington would provide the states so all could pay the $1,600 minimum will vary widely from state to state.

FAMILY HEAD

Under Nixon's formula, the head of the family could earn up to $60 a month more with no drop in his benefits and beyond that his benefits would be reduced by 50 cents for each $1 he earned.

"With such incentives," Nixon said, "most recipients who can work will want to work. This is part of the American character."

But those who refuse to work would be cut off.

"Everyone," said Nixon, "who accepts benefits must also accept work or training — provided suitable jobs are available either locally or at some distance if transportation is provided."

SOME INCOME

This, as Nixon pointed out, is not the frequently debated "guaranteed annual income" which would assure every American some income, whether he worked or not, but it was a step in that direction — just as medicare and medicaid can be called trends toward nationalized health care.

"A guaranteed income would undermine the incentive to work" and he opposes it, Nixon said. But the "family assistance plan" increases the incentive to work, he said.

Turning to the question of costs, Nixon said while they were bound to rise in the short run, they would fall in the long run, when people now on welfare start finding employment.

WORK INCENTIVES

"If we fail to make this investment in work incentives now . . . we will only be pouring good money after bad in ever-increasing amounts," he said.

"If we do invest in this modernization, the heavily-burdened taxpayer at least will see the light at the end of the tunnel. And the man who now looks ahead only to a lifetime of dependency will see hope for a life of work and pride and dignity."

"Poverty," said the president, "is not only a state of income. It is also a state of mind and a state of health. Poverty must be conquered without sacrificing the will to work, for if we take the route of the permanent handout, the American character will itself be impoverished."

Senate Breaks New Ground On Germs, Gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate hammered out a strongly-worded compromise amendment Friday establishing new ground rules for the military's testing and storage of lethal germ and gas warfare weapons.

It scheduled a vote for Monday on a consolidated amendment which would control open air testing of lethal germ and gas warfare agents. The amendment also sets up strict standards for transportation of chemical-biological warfare weapons in the United States and for their storage at overseas bases.

Senator Thomas McIntyre (D—N.H.), said the Pentagon had approved the amendment and that chairman John Stennis of the Senate armed services committee has agreed to accept it. McIntrye said, however, he expected some opposition.

The agreement—and another compromise involving the army's controversaal MBT70 tank — ended a tense week of voting which saw the Senate block a move to prevent deployment of the antiballistic missile system on a 50 to 50 tie vote.

Congressional Audit

Earlier, critics of military spending voluntarily withdrew their amendment to cut off funding authority for the MBT70 main battle tank when members of the Senate armed services committee agreed to submit the issue to a congressional audit.

The compromise brightened chances for early passage of the $20 billion defence procurement bill. But Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said it was doubtful the Senate could get through all the amendments to the bill by Wednesday, when Congress is scheduled to take off for a three-week vacation.

Critics of the proposed new tank charged it was prohibitively expensive.

The CBW amendment, cosponsored by a dozen senators who had introduced their own proposals, would:

● Ban procurement of germ warfare delivery systems entirely.

● Prohibit storage of lethal CBW materials outside the U.S. without notification to the country involved and without specific approval from the secretary of state in writing to both House and Senate foreign affairs committees.

● Bar transportation of lethal CBW agents to or from military installation in the U.S. without permission from the surgeon-general. Except during a declared war, written notice to Congress would be required before they can be transported inside the U.S.

It's All Kept Secret

● Bar open air testing of lethal chemical agents or disease-producing germs unless the surgeon-general determines it would not be a health hazard.

McIntyre, chairman of the armed services research subcommittee, said many of these CBW controls were already in effect. He said the Pentagon already had "tight, careful practices in this testing, but it's all kept secret."

He emphasized the amendments do not ban CBW testing entirely. "I have to make it plain that as long as our enemies have them, we're well advised to have some ourselves; because if they know that, they know they will get it back in their face" if they ever choose to attack with CBW weapons.

The compromise was struck after an all-day talkathon by Senator Thomas Eagleton (D—Mo.), the sponsor of the amendment to strike $54,500,000 earmarked for the tank in the $20 billion military hardware bill. He stalled because two or three of his allies were absent and the vote would have been too close to risk a showdown.

Chairman John Stennis (D—Miss.) of the armed services committee — trying to move the procurement bill along — agreed to write a letter to the General Accounting Office asking for an advisory opinion on whether the tank had become prohibitively expensive, as its opponents claim.

Amendments in Store

In exchange, Eagleton and other MBT70 critics agreed not to press their armament — at least until the defence appropriations bill comes to the floor later in the year.

Stennis warned, however, the decision would in no way establish a precedent for resolving disputes about defence spending. More than 201 amendments are pending to the measure—including proposals to cut of funds for open air testing of germ warfare devices, deny the navy a new aircraft carrier and kill the air force's planned supersonic bomber.

Unlike the MBT70 — which found few staunch defenders in the Senate — these other weapons were expected to be hotly contested.

The tank agreement did serve to cool off the Senate after Wednesday's narrow approval of the Safeguard defensive missile system and Thursday's equally close vote to give the GAO subpoena powers over defence contractors.

The GAO is a branch of Congress and serves as a watchdog over federal spending. The Pentagon's critics are trying to give it a meaningful role in watching the defence dollar, and Friday's compromise further increased that authority.

U.K.'s Gibraltar Test

Spanish Watch Exercise

GIBRALTAR (Reuters)—British soldiers repulsed a mock assault by marine commandos on the Rock of Gibraltar early Friday in an exercise to practise landing techniques and test the colony's defences.

Waves of marines from the 22,000-ton carrier Bulwark swept in aboard helicopters and beach-landing craft to positions around the naval yard and the military sector on the south end of the peninsula.

But the fortress defences were manned by more than 1,000 British troops, outnumbering the attacking forces two to one.

Four Spanish warships were anchored off-shore to watch the simulated 90-minute invasion on the Rock, which Madrid claims as its own.

Five Spanish F-104 Starfighter jets cruised back and forth over the Spanish border town of La Linea while two RAF Hunter jets circled the Rock.

A British spokesman said there was no interference by the Spanish jets and no question of them buzzing the peninsula. They were merely making their presence felt, he added.

Many of the helicopters were shot out of sky — in the war-games sense — and those who landed were later "wiped out" by machine-gun nests sprinkled around the southerly tip.

★ ★ ★

The Royal Navy maintained the exercise was routine training, planned months ago. It expressed surprise at the interest it aroused. But some observers said it was a political manoeuvre in the diplomatic war with Spain. Madrid recently ordered the closing of the land frontier in a stepped-up campaign for Gibraltar's return.

Warnings Issued

Floods Near Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Flood warnings were issued Friday to communities in a 75-mile radius west and north of Edmonton and for low areas in the city.

Flood peaks on rivers, a result of torrential rainfall in the Rocky Mountain foothills last weekend, are moving toward more heavily settled areas in the Edmonton region.

A. M. Mustapha, an agriculture department river flow forecaster, said the Pembina River near Entwistle, 50 miles west of Edmonton, recorded a peak flow early Friday and was receding as the flood peak moved farther east.

He said low-lying areas on the Pembina River from Entwistle to Jarvie, 75 miles north of Edmonton, likely will be flooded.

In Edmonton, city officials warned residents in low areas along the North Saskatchewan River to prepare to clear basements for possible flooding. A flood peak is expected this weekend, especially if forecast rainfall develops.

Most serious flooding reported early this week was on the McLeod River near Cadomin, 160 miles west of Edmonton. The McLeod and Pembina are tributaries of the Athabasca River, which flows north into Lake Athabasca.

A water resources branch spokesman said the Pembina River channel has a peak capacity of 13,000 cubic feet a second. Early Friday it reached 22,000 at Entwistle and by mid-afternoon had dropped to 18,000.

The crest, moving east, may flood some low farmlands. Most communities along the Pembina are above the river valley.

Helicopter Brings Milk, Food

CADOMIN, Alta. (CP) — A Canadian Forces helicopter Friday transported two loads of milk and food into this community of 200 persons, isolated since Monday by rain-swollen rivers which cut off highways and severed telephone and power lines.

A spokesman for the Alberta Emergency Measures Organization said the supplies would be sufficient until roads can be opened Monday or Tuesday.

The helicopter from CFB Cold Lake, Alta., was in the area Thursday to rescue Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hemphill of Weyburn, Sask. The couple spent the night on the roof of a cabin in the McLeod River, 160 miles west of Edmonton.

Fugue Debut Today

Dawson

The first public performance of an organ fugue by a young Victoria composer will be given during an organ recital by Peter Bishop at 12:15 p.m. today in Christ Church Cathedral.

The composition is Fuge in Three Parts for Organ Without Pedals. The composer is 18-year-old Edward Dawson.

A native of Victoria, Mr. Dawson is not an organist but has studied violin with Julia Hunt, piano at the Victoria Conservatory of Music and now is studying the viola, which he plays in both the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and the Victoria Chamber Orchestra.

He received his early training in musical theory and composition from Rodney Webster. He is working toward his B. Mus. degree at the University of Victoria.

The young composer has had works performed at a students' concert at the McPherson Playhouse and also at a concert of 20th Century music in Christ Church Cathedral where he has sung in the choir for many years.

Salvation Chief from Sweden

New Army General Wants to Reach Young

By JOHN GALE

LONDON (Special) — Gen. Erik Wickberg, 65, the newly-elected leader of the Salvation Army, is Swedish, and the first general in the gunless army's history not from Britain or the British Commonwealth.

He is tall, bespectacled, with a rather old-fashioned courtesy. On being introduced he gives the hint of a bow from the waist. Yet he is relaxed and quietly confident. His office in the Salvation Army's new international headquarters in London is modest, and his uniform at first glance is little different from that of other Salvationists.

His English is perfect, with the faintest accent. He has been in London as chief of staff (second-in-command of the Salvation Army) for eight years, and came from Germany. He was trained in London between 1924 and 1925, and his first job was in Scotland. He was in London again from 1934 to 1939. He and his wife have four children in Sweden.

He is a good organizer, a fine chess player and something of an intellectual.

"I'm not taking over until September," he said. "It's not in order for me to make policy statements. But times change. We must not lose touch with the 'unchurched masses,' as William Booth (founder of the movement) said. We want to reach the young, and we believe this is only possible through our own clean-living young people . . ."

Six commissioners, members of the High Council that chose General Wickberg after long deliberation, were asked what was on their minds.

Commissioner Samuel Hepburn, National Commander, U.S.A. (including Mexico and South Vietnam), said: "William Booth was 100 years ahead of his time, tough he was considered by some people to be off his rocker. I'll tell you the word: a little daft. Now, 100 years later, lo and behold, I heard ex-Vice President Humphrey speaking to social workers from all over the world. Humphrey quoted words uttered by William Booth: 'The slums must go . . .' He said if you don't correct the situation of the slums you're going to be sorry.

"In America we're slum-conscious. We're teaching that it's necessary to get the slums out of the people. You've got to transform their thinking . . . the late Senator Robert Kennedy quoted the founder when he said he was 'opposed to the handout society' . . ."

Lieutenant-Commissioner William Chamberlain, territorial commander, Central America and West Indies: "One of the problems we are facing in my area is the widening gap between the haves and havenots. For instance, in Jamaica someone on vacation can spend $60 a night for a hotel room, yet the person serving him can be working for $7 to $12 a week.

"In Jamaica we have 100,000 children between 6 and 14 who have never spent a day in school. The Salvation Army conducts literacy classes. We have the largest service for the blind in the Caribbean . . . we have many nations, like Haiti, poorer than Jamaica, where the annual income is less than $72 per family . . ."

Commissioner Charles Davidson, travelling commissioner, a Scot: "My preoccupation has been the missionary service and its needs in the Far East and, more recently, Africa. You may be interested to know that practically all these areas were represented at the High Council, which means we have top-level leaders from these countries.

"Practically all my service has been related to the acquiring of funds towards the maintenance of this vast missionary enterprise that empraces more than two-thirds of the world population. We have excellent Japanese, Indian, Indonesian, and other leaders. In Korea we have 230 officers, all but 10 Koreans.

"In South Africa, Rhodesia, Kenya, Zambia, and Uganda I have been able to conduct multi-racial services . . ." But, he added, the policy of the Salvation Army was to "abstain from major political issues as distinct from moral or ethical problems. We seek to have no control over their political ideologies except in so far as they be Christian and expressing their Christianity in Salvation Army ways."

Commissioner Edward Carey, Territorial Commander, New York: "We have fiscal concerns, but our main concerns are about people. Slums are ghettos where the riots have erupted. I was quoted in America as saying 'God is in the riots.' What I really said was 'God would use the riots to stab awake conscience that has been too long asleep . . .' Getting the slum out of the man means getting the man committed to religious values"

★ ★ ★

Commissioner Hubert Scotney, Territorial Commander, Australia (eastern territory): "In Australia the Salvation Army has two officers, expert pilots, who carry out the ministry over vast areas . . . we feel very strongly in Australia that we now are a part of Southeast Asia, and we are developing contacts with our Asian neighbors."

Commissioner Hepburn: "There's no such thing as the American Salvation Army, the English, the Australian: It's The Salvation Army, one army. We've just elected a general; he's the top man for the works. We talk the same language, sing the same song, drink the same cup of tea."

Anglican Organist Concludes:

Evening Service Dead Issue

Sunday evening services in many Victoria churches are a dead issue, an Anglican organist has concluded after a personal survey.

"On a normal Sunday evening," he said, "United, Presbyterian and Anglican churches in downtown Victoria field between seven and 70 parishioners. To make the figures more impressive, add seven to 19 choir members, one or two clergymen, two or three servers and the organist."

FOR 25 YEARS

Mr. Proudman said a senior clergyman two years ago told him that Evensong had been dead for 25 years.

"I felt that his pronouncement bordered on the heretical," Mr. Proudman said.

But then he made his survey and found it to be, in many cases, true.

Proudman

He recalled with nostalgia the Evensong of a generation ago with the country vicar, surrounded by his flock, or the dimly-lit cathedral with its "glorious paid choir."

"But how often do people go now?" he asked, "or their children or their grandchildren?"

Evensong is well attended on Easter evening or at the Christmas carol service or the nameday of a church.

"Or when you join forces with the church down the road for a special film or your choir presents a sacred recital," Mr. Proudman added.

CHANGE SEEN

What has happened? Mr. Proudman believes that people have changed because their world has changed. Affluence, leisure and the five-day week have brought boats, trailers and cabins in their wake and Sunday entertainment on TV.

"More important is the testing of the church by challenging young minds which, though immature in articulation, have grasped the essential fact that in every phase of life, their elders must teach them through significant communication. Eager to learn, they insist that the learning must be a valid experience, not a pointless reminder of traditions."

ESSENTIAL POINT

Is the church failing in its evening services? Mr. Proudman believes that, essentially, it is.

Hindebound by institutional red tape, he says, it seems too timid to adopt a positive forward-looking attitude.

"Certainly the church should progress with steady caution, but ther comes a time when failure to act decisively in rethinking a problem becomes irresponsible."

SOME CHURCH

There is action in some evening churches, he found. In gospel halls where the congregation is invited to participate. Where the members learn a hymn of the month. Where the long sermon, "though somewhat vituperative, is challenging and attempts to deal with problems of today."

"Officials in this church welcome you warmly and will not let you escape without a handshake and an invitation to return."

RELEVANT IDEA

The Roman Catholic Church has discovered an idea which is relevant to the times, Mr. Proudman found.

"They have abandoned Latin for the language of the people," he said. "They have rescheduled and tailored their services to the convenience of worshippers."

He cited a Roman Catholic service at 5:15 p.m.

WITH FERVOR

There, he said, the Catholics can "drop in on God" after an afternoon out, repeat responses with fervor, listen to a seven-to-eight-minute instruction, receive the sacrament, enjoy the comfort of a strong Christian community and go home spiritually refreshed, the evening ahead of them.

"In this service the Roman Catholic Church has discovered an idea so new, so significant, that Christ himself recognized its worth in his Last Supper evening eucharist."

EARLY TRY?

"Hopefully I would say 'Yes'," Mr. Proudman said.

Program Tonight

King's Folks Help Inspire

A quartet from Vancouver — the King's Folks — will be featured in a special Saturday night Time of Inspiration at 7:45 p.m. today in the Alliance Church, 1039 Yates.

The group is from the Capitol Hill and Tenth Avenue Alliance Churches in Vancouver. Its members are David Hallam, son of Dan Hallam of the Rock of Ages quartet, second tenor; James Neilson, baritone; Del Bryant, first tenor; Paul Young, bass and organist. Pianist Mary Grace Poppy will accompany the group.

An added feature of the evening will be the showing of the Moody Science Film Signposts Aloft with astronaut John Glenn telling of man's greatest need in space.

The public is invited to the program, the pastor, Rev. Ted Chapman said Friday.

The musical group will also sing at the 11 a.m. Sunday service in the church. Rev. Warren Graham, missionary to Israel, will preach.

At the 7 p.m. Sunday service Mr. and Mrs. Graham, with their family, will present a program of pictures of Beer-Sheba, Israel.

Rev. George Ross, former member of the Victoria church and now pastor of one of the five Edmonton Alliance Churches, will be guest soloist.

Children

Vacation School On Bible

A daily vacation Bible school for children, aged 4 through 15, will be held in Lakehill Women's Institute Hall, 3880 Quadra, by Christ Lutheran Church of the Reformation from Monday through Aug. 22.

The school will be held from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Mondays through Fridays for the two weeks. Studies will be based on the Bible with special emphasis on the Ten Commandments.

SCHOOL AIM

The church's pastor, Rev. R. H. Goetjen, said this week that the aim of the vacation school was to teach children "to fear, love, trust and obey God and to bring them a knowledge of their sins and their need of a Saviour."

He said the teachers will try to motivate the children to surrender their lives to the Lord "and with His help to lead a life in obedience to His commandments."

Mr. Goetjen can be reached at 479-3914.

Conference Draws Victorians

A group of Victoria church members will attend the 11th Northwest International Mission Conference at Willamette University in Salem, Ore., from today until Wednesday.

Attending from the Victoria area are Rev. and Mrs. A. E. King, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Prior, Rev. and Mrs. John Wood, Mrs. Mary Bennett and Mrs. R. A. Sharrocks. Prof. Charles Burchill of Royal Roads Military College will speak to the conference on the subject, Toward Understanding China and the Chinese People.

The theme of the conference is Reconciliation in a Broken World. Theme speaker is Rev. William Walzer, executive director of Friendship Press, the education department for mission of the U.S. National Council of Churches.

Talk Sunday

Martin Buber on Education is the subject of a talk to be given by Ray Vickery at 10 a.m. Sunday in The Unitarian Church of Victoria. Mr. Vickery is a public school teacher.

Convention

The 49th annual national convention of the Catholic Women's League of Canada will be held in the Empress Hotel Sept. 15 to 20.

Outdoors

Baptists Taking Service

The 7 p.m. Sunday outdoor gospel service at the Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park will be conducted by Central Baptist Church.

Pastor Rev. John Moore will give the gospel message and a united choir from the church will provide the music. There will be special solos, duets, a male quartet and instrumental numbers. For those unable to attend the park service, the regular evening service will be held in the church.

The series of park services is sponsored as a community endeavor by the Victoria committee, Christian Business Men's Committee International and is in its 27th year.

History Falling

Sunlight falls on tumbling walls of Victoria's "big little department store" started by Jimmie Little 49 years ago at Quadra and Pembroke as wreckers clear site for new restaurant. Store pioneered long hours of shopping and was open from 9 a.m. till 2 a.m. including Sundays, from the start. Business was sold early this year and Mr. Little died in May in Hawaii.—(William E. Coed Slaying Case

Bluffing 'Bishop' Talks to Suspect

YPSILANTI, Mich. (UPI) — A man posing as an ordained bishop tricked jailers into letting him into the Washtenaw county jail for a two-hour talk with John Norman Collins, a college student charged with the murder of a young coed, police said Friday.

"This is fantastic," Ann Arbor Police Chief Walter Krasny said. Krasny confirmed that the immposter got by deputies and into the maximum security cell to see Collins.

The man was identified as Joseph Bartholomew Pasic, a self-styled bishop of the Doukhobors.

Police said Pasic marched into the county jail Monday dressed in what looked like clerical garb, presented credentials purporting to identify him as a bonafide bishop, and asked to see Collins.

Deputies inspected the papers, had him sign a register, and then asked the 22-year-old Collins if he wanted to see the man. "Yea, I'll see him," Collins was quoted as saying.

A deputy later asked Collins what they talked about. Collins would only say they chatted.

Collins is charged with the first-degree murder of Karen Sue Beineman, an 18-year-old Eastern Michigan University freshman, who was the seventh girl murder victim in this university area in two years.

Washtenaw county prosecutor William Delhey confirmed Pasic had been committed to the Ypsilanti state hospital as mentally ill in 1961. In 1963, a petition for Pasic's release on constitutional grounds was turned down by the county circuit court, but he was subsequently released by the hospital, Delhey said.

Sheriff Douglas Harvey said the man had been checked out in the past and did have credentials identifying him as a minister.

"By state law, I've got to let any minister in to see a prisoner any time he wants to," Harvey said. "The man was shook down by my Turnkeys and was allowed to talk with Collins through a screen. Collins said later that he doesn't want to talk with him again, so he hasn't been let back in."

Whole Town Kicks Habit of Smoking

The ones who smoked down to the wire drew frowns on disapproval from the central Iowa community's Cold Turkey Committee which has spearheaded the town's effort to kick the nicotine habit.

"I'm still puffing but time's getting short," said Mayor Dale Yount, a five-to-six-cigar-a-day man.

The deadline for quitting was 7 p.m. Smokers were urged to toss their cigarettes, cigars and pipes into a bonfire in the town square.

Dale Burger, 50, president of the 2,243-population town's service club, wasn't altogether happy about quitting but the pressure was on. "People don't like to see me smoke around here," said Burger, who started 34 years ago and was up to three packs of cigarettes a day before he gave it up.

Greenfield got the idea of giving up smoking en masse as a community project after it was chosen as one of the central Iowa locations for filming a movie about a little town that gets a $25,000,000 prize if all the residents forsake their nicotine habits.

Burger said he knew of only eight or 10 holdouts. "One of them was an 80 year old man who said it hasn't hurt him yet. Besides, he said he didn't want to live to be too old."

Cigarette displays in stores on the town square were draped with black crepe paper. Plastic covers were put on cigarette machines so it would be difficult — but still possible — to make purchases.

Signs on the main highway into town advised visitors that no smoking was appreciated.

The Cold Turkey Committee erected a giant cigarette in the square as a barometer to show how many people signed pledges to quit smoking or not to start.

Reporters View Moon Rock

Tiny, Shiny, Mysterious Holes

HOUSTON — There it was, Sample 10,020, big as life and twice as mysterious.

A genuine moon rock, about three inches by three inches, angular on one side rounded on the other, and twinkling from the reflections of tiny shiny particles.

Someone said it looked like an old-fashioned clinker, the kind that rolled out of a furnace bottom when you cleaned out the ashes.

And Dr. Jeffrey Warner, the geologist who showed reporters Friday their first moonrock, said earth rocks in New York City resemble the moon rock on display.

But resemble is all. No one knows what it is in the moon rock sample that glitters so strangely.

★ ★ ★

"It's a mystery," said Dr. William Greenwood, another geologist who has made preliminary examinations of the rock. "Everything about it is a mystery."

The rock was enclosed in a glass container behind a glass wall on the third floor of the Lunar Receiving Laboratory.

Dr. Warner said the sample probably contained the minerals feldspar, olivine and pyroxene.

Some of the tiny holes on the rock, he said, apparently were caused by the impact of high-velocity meteorites. Around them were white halos caused by the crushing impact.

What about the holes, the ones without white halos around them, someone asked the geologist.

Dr. Warner grinned. "Those are just whole holes," he said.

Only about 20 to 30 scientists and laboratory technicians had seen the moon rock before about 10 newsmen were brought into the viewing room.

Although the rock weighed only about two pounds, it was so hard that Warner said a person would have to strike it at least four or five times with a hammer to crack or break it.

He also said he had soon it in three different colors, depending on the intensity of the light. Friday it looked light gray with tinges of pink. Another time it looked plain and dark gray. Again, it had looked cocoa-brown, he said.

Whatever it looks like, the public probably won't see it or any other moon samples for months or more likely years — if ever.

But most of them have made it clear during the week they would much prefer to see one of the moon rocks.

Blood Test Key to Release

HOUSTON (AP) — Pre-breakfast blood samples taken today from the Apollo 11 astronauts will be either their ticket out of quarantine to meet their public — or the key that locks them in isolation for more tests.

Doctors will examine Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin the first humans exposed to moon soil, in a search for any indication of disease from the moon.

If the tests turn up nothing, the astronauts and 20 persons quarantined with them in the Lunar Receiving Laboratory will be released late Sunday or early Monday morning.

If unexplained organisms or serious changes were found in the blood, the 23 in quarantine would remain isolated until the germs are either identified or cured. That might mean an indefinite stay in the isolation quarters.

Blood samples will also be taken from the 20 support personnel in the quarantine, but officials have said the astronauts are the true test for any moon microbes taking hold in humans.

Wheel Glow Halts Flight

EDMONTON (CP) — A DC-9 chartered aircraft with 160 persons on board was called back from takeoff at Edmonton international airport when an air traffic controller noticed a glow from the plane's wheels caused by a magnesium casting on a tire that had gone flat.

Airport manager W. A. Morley said the control tower alerted the pilot as the aircraft taxied down the runway. The plane stopped and two tires blew out.

B.C. French Radiomen Seeking Separatism

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five of the six production employees of Canadian Broadcasting Corp.'s French-language network three have submitted statements refusing to work in the CBC's Vancouver region under English direction.

The five, working for CBUF-FM for the past year and a half, said Friday they would continue with the network only under direction from the French-language network, announcer Michel Mongeau said.

"Since we have been here, we've been hoping that CBUF-FM would be able to separate from the English network to facilitate broadcasting of what we think is French culture," Mr. Mongeau said.

"It has been made clear to us it will not do so.

"We definitely do not want to work any longer under English direction," the said they would prefer transfers to French network directed regions.

The statements — in the form of resignations effective Sept. 9 if CBUF-FM continues under direction of the regional English-language network — were submitted earlier this week.

Involved are Mr. Mongeau, producer Walter Aube, assistant producer Gay Gelinas, announcer Andre Vigeant and public relations officer Fountaine Dube.

In Montreal, a CBC public relations officer said in a telephone interview he thought the situation was "more a tempest in a teapot than anything else. I cannot foresee that this cannot be straightened out."

The French-language station in Vancouver employes six production employees and four technicians.

Two months ago, the group held a sitdown strike to protest the current practice of working under English direction.

Photo Workers' Strike Being Taken to City Hall

By DON COLLINS

He agreed readily Friday to discuss such a prospect Monday with two of the city's labor leaders.

It was the second significant development within two days in connection with the strike of a handful of workers that began at Hy Fidelity Photos, 750 Discovery, last Nov. 27.

COMPANY FAILS

The first saw the failure of the company to have the Teamsters Union ousted as bargaining agent for the employees.

The B.C. Labor Relations Board rejected a company application for decertification of the Teamsters.

"The board still recognizes us as being the representative of the employees, and this means the company can't do what it set out to do — have the pickets removed from in front of its building," said Jim Scott, Teamsters' representative in Vancouver.

HOW MANY?

The argument hinged on how many employees were involved. The company said six of the nine were laid off before the strike and couldn't be included.

Only three workers were involved in what is believed to have been the smallest supervised strike vote on record. One voted to remain on the job and two to strike. The company said only one of the two remained with the union.

The Teamsters contended the six were laid off unjustly and that the union represented all the employees.

The strike occurred as the Teamsters sought a first contract, and has continued despite other attempts to effect settlement.

The union says Hy Fidelity is really just another name for Mortifee Munshaw Ltd. in Vancouver, and has had the support of labor in trying to effect a boycott.

Labor council secretary Larry Ryan said Friday's approach to Ald. Frampton was made as a result of pressure brought upon the council's executive by affiliated unions. The unions have asked that an attempt be made to have Mayor Hugh Stephen intervene.

Mayor Stephen is on holidays and Ald. Frampton has been serving as acting mayor. He has agreed to meet in the mayor's office with Mr. Ryan and John Schibli, acting president of the labor council.

Improved Access On Way

North Saanich council will develop and improve six beach access roads following a survey of public roads and paths in the municipality.

Ten other locations have been earmarked for later improvement.

Improved accesses will be developed at Inverness Avenue to Cole Bay, West Saanich Road south to Patricia Bay, west end of Tatlow Road to Deep Cove, north end of West Saanich Road, Fernie Wynd east to high water, and extension of Amity Drive to Deacross Terrace.

Jordan Attacked Third Straight Day

From AP

Israeli jets attacked inside Jordan Friday for the third time in three days, bombing Jordanian rocket positions, an Israeli military spokesman said.

He said the attack was in reprisal for the rocket attack Thursday night on Israeli potask works at Sodom on the Dead Sea. The planes encountered light anti-aircraft fire in the 35-minute attack but all returned safely to their base, the spokesman said.

Before the air attack, Arab guerrillas in the Jordanian capital, Amman, said they launched raids on three Israeli civilian and military outposts during the night, killing 60 Israelis.

The Palestine Armed Struggle command in Amman said "several hundred" guerrillas were involved in the raids in the northern Jordan Valley. It said four Israeli tanks and other army vehicles were destroyed in the three-hour raid across the Israeli-Jordanian ceasefire line.

In Tel Aviv, an army spokesman described the report as "the fruit of imagination from beginning to end."

Actions appear to have swung from Israel's Suez canal front with Egypt to the eastern Israeli-Jordanian front. Israeli political circles fear a major outbreak along the eastern border where 50,000 Syrian and Iraqi troops are reported dug in with the Jordanians.

Falling Coconuts Hazard for Cars

By STAN DELAPLANE

PENAAULA, Tahiti — You can't get insurance down here against falling coconuts. That's why your rent car has a shell key chain marked: "Don't park under the coconut trees, s'il vous plait!"

There's a legend that no hotel can grow taller than a coconut tree on Tahiti. But that's fini, Claude. We came down to see the new Hotel Maeva which cost $7,000,000 to go up seven storeys.

Across the island beside Matavai Bay, there's the new multi-storied Tahara'a. They are not boxy skyscrapers. Tahara'a goes down the side of a hill. Maeva goes up in terraces. Something like the old stone temples.

But auwe! It's not the old Grand. (Where the rain blew through the cracks.) Or long gone Les Tropiques. (Where the lizards ran up the walls to eat the bugs. What a supermarket that was!)

For the new elegance in French Polynesia, you pay: $26 double, $23 single. The breakfast — (rolls, juice and coffee) — nudges you $1.50. Cocktails are $1.25. And the taxi to town is $3.50.

The Sopac is no bargain basement. French Polynesia doesn't want you melting into the fish-and-free-banana economy of the native Tahitians. (Even the millionaires have to get out after six months. "Because by then they have learned to live cheaply," was a frank explanation I heard.

But — there ARE cheap places to stay if you can make it. Couple of hotels on the Papeete waterfront are listed at $4. I didn't go in. From the outside they looked old, battered. Something out of Somerset Maugham.

Now the best buy in the South Pacific is Club Mediterranee. This cost $599 for EVERYTHING. Air round trip from the West Coast. Cottage. Meals. Wine. Skin diving. (You pay for cigarettes and any liquor beside the wine.) The club is on Moorea (across from Tahiti); on Raiatea in the Islands-Under-The-Wind.

The islands are losers for the French government. There's no income tax. Almost everything is imported. Native labor is paid little. But the taxes put the Otis on the price list.

"What are the cheapest islands?"

The outer islands of the Fijis. These are the getaway islands—and there ARE a few modest places to stay comfortably.

Not for swingers though. Papeete on Tahiti is the Paris of the South Seas. A sandy coconut port with two or three noisy bars. Quinn's is most famous. Bar Lea another. French sailors. Tahitian girls in flower crowns. Music that would blow a safe. And a coeducational bathroom that requires plenty of savoir faire.

"Can we get skin diving equipment?"

Yes, all over the French islands.Check in with the Chasse Sous-marine Club for where to dive. What's dangerous. If you wear glasses, have your prescription ground into a face plate for your mask and take that with you. You can rent everything else.

"We planned on visiting Tahiti enroute to Australia. But we are not young and we do like comfort . . ."

These new hotels are as good as anything at Waikiki. The Hotel Bora Bora is cottage style but perfectly comfortable. And you'll find no better food in the world. They have a Chinese cook who's been threatening to quit for years. But somehow they keep him.

Fishing Vessel Towed to Port

SEATTLE (AP) — The coast guard reported the 39-foot fishing boat Signe S. of Astoria was towed safely to Newport, Ore., after being in trouble 90 miles off the coast.

Courtroom Parade

Mother Faints After Testimony

A mother fainted and fell to the floor Friday, moments after she had testified in Victoria Provincial Court during a preliminary hearing for her son, who is charged with cultivating marijuana.

Larry G. M. Hatcher, 20, of trial by judge and jury in a higher court and released on his own recognizance.

Shaking and repeatedly gasping for breath, Mrs. Hatcher answered the prosecutor's questions. At one point, she reached for a glass of water, but hardly managed to drink it.

Judge William Ostler smiled at her and said, "Thank you, madam, you may step down."

Mrs. Hatcher left the witness box, took two or three faltering steps and fell. The woman's husband and daughter jumped from their seats and immediately assisted her. An ambulance took Mrs. Hatcher to hospital several minutes later.

Two Sent to Jail

Two men were sentenced to 2½ years in jail after pleading guilty to charges of possessing stolen goods valued at $841.50.

Kalman J. Tendl, 24, and Bryan M. Jossul, 20, both of the Windsor Hotel, were arrested Thursday after they were found in possession of several rifles, radios, clothing and ammunition.

Court was told the goods had been stolen from the residence of Stephen Jossul, the father of one of the accused.

Both men have criminal records dating back several years. When the prosecutor read out the past offences, which included breaking and entering, theft and mischief, escaping lawful custody and obstructing a police officer, Judge Ostler shook his head.

"You started when you were 15, didn't you? You simply will not learn from bitter experience," he said.

"I cannot see why young boys like you prefer this kind of life when life could offer you so many good things, including self respect."

Man, Wife Fined

Louis and Barbara Planes were arrested by Victoria police Thursday as they were staggering through the city's downtown area shouting obscenities at passersby, according to evidence.

Court was told one of the police officers had his shirt torn during the arrest.

When the husband asked Judge Ostler for time to pay the fine, prosecutor John MacIntyre objected.

"When someone behaves this way, he shouldn't be given the opportunity of paying the fine later."

Magistrate Ostler agreed with the prosecutor, but granted the accused one week to raise the money when he heard Planes was supporting a large family.

"I don't want to hurt your family, but don't you see that it is reprehensible and outrageous for a man with a family to conduct himself in this manner."

Little-Known Pro Shares Milwaukee Lead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ed Moehling, taking a second stab at making a life on the pro tour, shot a second-round 69 Friday and tied Fred Marti for the half-way lead in the $100,000 Greater Milwaukee Open Golf tournament at 141, three under par for 36 holes.

Marti, a 28-year-old Texan in his sixth year on the tour and still seeking his first victory, had a second-round 70.

One shot back was rookie pro John Miller, who had a 74 for 142 and was tied with Steve Opperman, 73; England's Peter Townsend, the first-round leader who went to a 75, and South African Allen Henning, 73.

★ ★ ★

With most of the top names in the game bypassing this event to practise for the Professional Golfers' Association Championship next week—and with the gusty wind troubling those who did show—golf's second-line players moved into dominant positions.

Moehling, for example, has won only $166.67 this year. Miller has been a pro less than six months.

Gary Player was the only major name among the leaders. The little South African shot a 70 for 143 and was tied with five others.

They were Phil Rodgers and Rocky Thompson, each with 71, Jim Wiechers and Bob Lunn, each 73, and Jerry Abbott, 72.

Arnold Palmer rallied for a 71 and 147. That put him under the wire for the final two rounds. Defending champion Dave Stockton, shot a 73 for 150, just missing the cut.

No Written Objections

Sewers in Panhandle: October Start Seen

By NANCY BROWN

Sewers for the Esquimalt Panhandle, originally promised for completion this month, might be started in October according to municipal engineer William Gerry.

He said a council initiation to get the $167,000 project started had not run into much objection.

"There have been one or two squawks, but we have received no written objection or complaint about the plan," he said.

PETITION DEADLINE

Residents have until Aug. 29 to petition against the plan which will cost $1,000 a lot or $120.42 annually for 15 years. Half of the 28 property owners concerned would have to object to the plan for the council-initiated project to fail.

The sewers were promised to the former View Royal residents in a form letter from the Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant and council sent to Panhandle residents just before an amalgamation referendum held last year.

LACK OF ACTION

There have been complaints from Panhandle residents of lack of action on the part of council since they joined the municipality.

Mayor Bryant said that under the present plan 80 per cent of the Panhandle, belonging to 17 residents, could be sewered. The work will be undertaken in three sections, starting at the Shirley Road end.

Redistribution of land belonging to the remaining 11 property owners could hold up sewering of the remaining 20 per cent of the land unless residents agreed to replotting plans being drawn up by the engineers.

LAND SUBDIVIDED

The land has been subdivided in the past into irregularly shaped lots which made provision of roads and sewers impracticable, said Mr. Gerry.

He said the poorly planned area has had boundary lines redrawn with the owners receiving as nearly as possible comparable land to that which they held previously.

Approval of new right of way for roads was needed before sewers could be put in, he said.

TWO OWNERS

He added that failure of any two property owners to approve the plans could hold up sewering for all the people involved in the replotting area.

Council has also spelled out the charges for provision of services in the formerly unorganized territory.

Property owners will pay the entire cost of streets, boulevards, sidewalks and street lighting according to their frontage on the serviced areas.

POTENTIAL LOTS

While the cost of sewers has been set at the promised $1,000 a lot, property owners will pay that amount for each potential lot into which their land could be subdivided.

Skillings Shreds Teachers' Stand

ELECTION '69

By IAN STREET

Trade Minister Waldo Skillings has attacked the B.C. Teachers' Federation for practising "politics at its very worst" in the election campaign.

He told a press conference late Friday that as a former teacher he was "very disappointed" by the position taken by the profession.

"Teachers are hired to teach—not to set policy," Mr. Skillings said. "Our teachers are the highest paid in Canada, and we have the finest teaching staff in all Canada. But I think they should stay out of politics and do their job."

Mr. Skillings said the BCTF campaign "won't fool the public." He added that the only objection the teachers seemed to have to the government's education finance formula was that it "allows the people who pay the taxes to say whether there should be frills."

"They want to put a stop to that. They don't want the taxpayers to have this say," he said.

Mr. Skillings noted that Dean Neville Scarfe, head of the faculty of education at the University of British Columbia, returned from a tour of four continents and claimed this province's education system was better than any he had seen abroad.

Works Minister W. N. Chant, who is Mr. Skillings' running mate in Victoria, told the press conference: "The taxpayers will have their say (regarding the stand taken by the teachers' federation) when they cast their ballots on Aug. 27."

Both candidates joined Premier Bennett in predicting a Social Credit majority win at the polls. The press conference was held at the Skillings home at 1721 Rockland, about one hour after Mr. Skillings was discharged from hospital, where he has been undergoing treatment for a kidney injury.

★ ★ ★

"In five weeks in hospital I've met a lot of people," Mr. Skillings said. "I've never heard so many say they will vote Social Credit for the first time in the election. I'm predicting the Bennett government will be returned with a minimum of 35 to 36 seats (out of 55)."

★ ★ ★

He added: "There are going to be two people with very red faces in this province after Berger and McGeer have been predicting the seats they're going to win. After the election Pat (Liberal leader Patrick McGeer) is going to have to go back to adjudicating whales."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Skillings said he had been ordered by his doctor to "take it easy" because it would take several more weeks for his seriously bruised kidney to clear up. "Bill has been carrying the ball for both of us. But now I'm prepared to do anything they want me to do."

He said much of his campaigning would be done over radio and television.

'Lying Around' Since June?

Big Loss Feared From Unsent Wire

By ALAN ANDERSON

Embarrassed officials of Canadian Pacific-Canadian National Telecommunications admitted Friday the company "might have made a mistake" in failing to send a telegram handed in to them June 30.

For 29-year-old Greek immigrant Nick Roubekas, the company's admission is small consolation. CP-CN's "mistake" could cost him $20,000, he says.

A distressed man, Mr. Roubekas explained that he sent a telegram — or thought he did — to a real estate agent in Corinth, Greece, authorizing him to go ahead with purchase of a house on behalf of his sister, who still lives there.

"I went into the cable office at 1102 Government Street at about 1 p.m. on June 30," he said. "I wrote out, in English, the message I wanted to send.

"I handed it in, and a girl there read it back to me. There was no misunderstanding about what it said.

"Then I paid for it — $3.50 or $3.75, I forget exactly how much — and left."

That was 40 days ago.

When 38 days had gone by without a reply, Mr. Roubekas became concerned and Thursday he checked with the CP-CN office.

"I spoke to a lady there and asked her to confirm that the cable had been sent," he said.

"She said 'Of course it was sent. It must have gone. We don't just keep them lying around, you know.'

"But I told her if it had been sent I should have received a reply, and finally she agreed to look into it."

A day later, on Friday, the CP-CN Telecommunications office telephoned Mr. Roubekas and admitted in some embarrassment that this time, apparently, the cable had just been kept "lying around."

Mr. Roubekas said the company offered to send the cable immediately, with an explanation that it had been delayed by their office.

"But I don't know if that's going to do any good," he said. "In Greece, the laws of property are very complicated, and my sister can't do anything without my consent.

"This delay could cost my sister and me $20,000 — maybe more," he said.

A supervisor at CP-CN Telecommunications told the Colonist he had "heard of some kind of mixup," but said he was not authorized to give any details. "Anyway, we're too busy right now," he added.

The company's head agent, L.A. Nicholls, was the only person who could talk about the case, he said, "and he won't be in the office until Monday."

Asked if the company accepted any liability for its error, the supervisor replied: "Oh, no — I don't think so. It's right there on the back of our form, you know; it says that we're not liable if a message is not transmitted or not delivered."

★ ★ ★

Nick Roubekas came to Canada five years ago, and has lived in Victoria for 3½ years. He works as night cook at the Dominion Hotel.

Like many immigrants, he has often held two jobs at a time and worked hard to save money. In this way he managed to buy a house at 463 Superior Street.

"Now I could lose all that I've worked for, just through someone else's mistake," he said.

"It doesn't seem fair to me."

Russians Leave In Style

Pandora-Fort

20-Storey Building Planned

A Vancouver firm said Friday it wants to build a 20-storey apartment-commercial structure at Pandora and Fort next year.

City Manager Dennis Young said the firm, Reid Properties Ltd., has made no application for a building permit. He said also that the proposed height of the building is beyond the limit allowed by a city bylaw.

Representatives of the company have had preliminary talks with the city's staff, Mr. Young said.

The same firm recently announced plans to develop the Victoria waterfront with a $25,000,000 complex.

In Friday's announcement, company president J. A. Reid said the 20-storey structure would be named the Stadacona Triangle and would be built at a cost of about $4,500,000.

Judd listens as Belli makes point

Mark Her Paid–Belli

Winnie Ruth Fled To Help Her Case

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A trembling, sobbing Winnie Ruth Judd told an extradition hearing Friday she "never tried to hurt anyone who threatened me" during the seven years she was free after escaping jail.

The 64-year-old matron, the famed trunk murderess of the 1930s, was arrested June 27 while working as a housekeeper in Danville, using the name Marian Lane.

Richard Turner, Gov. Ronald Reagan's assistant legal affairs secretary, conducted the one-hour hearing to determine if Mrs. Judd should be returned to Arizona as a fugitive.

She said she "went over the wall" seven times between 1931 when she was first incarcerated and her last escape in 1962 "but most of the time I went back." She returned voluntarily five of the seven times.

Mrs. Judd said she fled from the institution "to help my case," but never explained what she meant. During her stays in the hospital, she said, she "did hair for many of the patients — as many as 150 a week — and people from the outside too."

When some persons questioned the legality of her activities, she said, she switched to taking care of youngsters at the institution, first blind, Cretin and Mongoloid children, then teenagers.

Belli pleaded repeatedly that Mrs. Judd "is as much rehabilitated as any human being can be. If not, rehabilitation is a mockery," he said.

He said most persons convicted of first-degree murder are sentenced to life in prison but serve seven to 10 years. "She has faced 34 years, more than three times life. She has paid her debt as much as if she walked into the bank and put down a note marked 'paid.'"

Turner said he would pass his opinion to Reagan within three or four days and then a decision by the governor could be expected within 10 days.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me what to do about a non-stop talker. This relative has come to make her home with me. Please don't tell me it's a rotten idea. I know it is but there was no alternative.

The minute she opens her eyes in the morning her mouth goes into gear. She has a voice like a macaw and an uncanny memory for detail. It's talk, talk, talk. The only time she stops talking is when I go to the bathroom or to bed. Oh — she stops talking when the phone rings. I used to hate phone calls. Now I love them. I'm delighted to hear from anybody.

She has been with me two weeks and I thought I'd get accustomed to her incessant gab but I'm beginning to doubt I will. Do you have any suggestions that might help? — Bunioned Ear.

Noise Level Subsides

Dear Ear: People can and do become accustomed to sounds which at first seem unpleasant and abrasive. Families who live near airports, railroad depots, fire houses and police stations report that the noise was extremely bothersome. After a while they don't even hear it. So be of good cheer. A transistor radio in your pocket might help you over the transition period, but time is your best ally.

□

Dear Ann Landers: When a single woman gets involved with a married man why is she always the one who pays the big price? I have never once heard of a married man grieving over a lost love. The woman does the crying, manufactures alibis for her friends, goes to a doctor for medication to calm her nerves or, as in my case, to a psychiatrist to regain her sanity.

Nothing bad ever happens to the man. He goes on his merry way — usually with a new lady love. Why? Why? Why? — Recent Victim.

Dear Re: As the poet said, "To a woman love is all — to a man 'tis a thing apart."

Women who become involved with married men lead with their hearts. And married men who chase around take things apart. I see no evidence that it will ever change.

Birthmark Will Fade

Dear Ann Landers: Our third child was born two months ago. He was perfect when we brought him home from the hospital. When he was about three weeks old we noticed a pink birthmark shaped like a strawberry on his chin. He didn't have it when he was born. The mark has been getting larger and it is now the size of a half dollar. We asked the doctor about it and he said "Leave it alone. It will probably go away."

My wife is upset over his indifference. She doesn't want to go to another physician because she's afraid it might offend this faithful doc who has been very good to our children.

Please check your medical consultants and let us know what you find out. — Anxious to Hear.

Dear Anxious: The birthmark you describe will probably disappear. Approximately half of such birthmarks fade out completely by the time the child is five years old. About 75 per cent of the rest are no longer visible by the time a child is eight. So, take Old Faithful's advice.

Cheaper Than Sailboat

Hand-Weaving 'Automation Rebellion'

—Kinsman

Mrs. Milne weaves on 27-inch loom

By HELEN MORRIS

So you're looking for something to do with those long summer nights.

Take up weaving.

It doesn't cost as much as a sailboat—about $100 for a second-hand loom—and you can make your own clothes, wedding gifts, chairs, sculptures, lamps, and other assorted goodies.

Mrs. P. T. Milne, next year's president of the Victoria Hand Weavers' Guild, says that weaving is a recreation for the whole family. Children, and particularly male children, have been haunting the guild's exhibition in the provincial museum.

"We're overwhelmed with the response. Some children come both morning and afternoon. They come about 8 in the morning and weave for a while, and then go for a swim in the Crystal Garden, and come back and weave some more. The boys particularly are so enthused."

And Mrs. Milne said that there are many husband-and-wife teams in the weaving business. "Sometimes the man manufactures looms, while the woman weaves, but often the husband weaves, too." She said one of the world's best rug-makers is a man—that's her stopper for males who think weaving is "sissy."

Interest in the weaving exhibit hasn't been restricted to Victoria people, either. Mrs. Milne said a lot of Americans showed a great deal of interest in the weaving process, and even asked her for names of places in their communities where they could buy a loom.

And weaving "like everything else," Mrs. Milne said, "is easy once you know how."

But it's not that easy.

You've invested $100 in a second-hand loom which will eventually produce cloth 27 inches wide. And you've bought the wool you need, (rather than spinning it yourself, as a true weaver would have done).

After making some "simple" mathematical calculations, and waving your magic wand around for a while, you hopefully know how many threads to an inch you want. Then you wind the threads around the "warp beam," a cylinder about six inches in diameter.

From the warp beam they are threaded through four sets of needles — the number of needles varies, depending on how tightly you want the material woven, and the pattern desired. You have prepared spools of thread to weave into the wool, and you're ready to go.

You can really weave now, by "simply" passing the spools across the wool threaded into the loom. And the pattern is varied by changing the position of the different sets of needles (called hettles).

It must be simpler than it sounds, because Mrs. Milne says the guild in Victoria has about 90 members, who do their own spinning and weaving, and even try to have an exhibition and sale of their products about once a year.

The museum exhibit, items from which are not for sale, contains rugs and scarves and purses and wall-hangings. And a lamp—made out of bamboo sticks drawn together with woven wool. And a chair covered with hand-woven material. As Mrs. Milne says, "You can make almost anything with a loom."

Mrs. Milne sees weaving as "a rebellion against automation." The worker and his product were finally united again, in an age where most men never saw the final outcome of their labor. In weaving, the person ran the machine, rather than the machine running the person. And "you create something."

★ ★ ★

No woman, or man, who weaves her own cloth will ever run into someone wearing an identical dress on the street. "If you make your own cloth, you can get a combination of thread no one else has."

It would make an original answer to the familiar question, "Did you make your own dress?"

"Yes. And I wove the material."

Tiny Coffin 'Offensive'

BLANTYRE, Malawi (UPI) —John Munk, 45, was arrested on charges of mailing "grossly offensive matter" after he sent a young woman a package containing a miniature coffin. Inside was a note which read: "You are being watched."

A Lovelier You

Sundae, Pizza All Add Weight

By MARY SUE MILLER

Super sundaes, nuts, pizzas, chocolate bars, brownies, potato chips and more — and more — and more. All between meals, of course!

Just how does it add up? Well, have a chocolate bar between classes, a super sundae after school and bag of nuts with TV and you chalk up 1,350 calories.

That number is more than half the daily total you need to maintain normal weight. And there are still three meals to count in.

For the balance of nutriments you meals provide, you must eat them. Your health, growth, vitality, skin and hair depend on it.

As three well-planned meals for teen girls total between 2,200 and 2,500 calories per day, you can see why you don't need the snack calories. And what you don't need turns to f-a-t.

Were you to change your snacking habits, you would stop gaining and start losing. Here's the kind of things slim girls nibble on: tomato juice, fresh fruit juice, consomme, fresh fruit, cheese crackers, pretzel sticks, no-cal pop, milk ice, skim milk. Try the scheme. It works.

Woman Drowns

GRAND FORKS (CP) — Police said a woman drowned near here while a woman companion ignored her calls for help, thinking she was joking. The victim was identified as Mary Collins, 46, of Grand Forks, who drowned in the Kettle River.

Celebration in U.S.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Margarson of 52 Dawson Heights will be in Minneapolis, Minn., Sunday to celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary. They were married in Winnipeg, where Mr. Margarson worked in the engineering department of the telephone company until they retired to Saanichton in 1946. They came to Victoria in 1952. Mr. and Mrs. Margarson have two daughters, Mrs. Bonnie Mills of Carmel, Calif., and Mrs. Harvena Hoyt of Minneapolis, four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. — (Kinsman)

Neck-to-Shoes Design

Matched-Up Man Rage Began as Summer Fun

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

ROME — The most revolutionary new fashion to come out of Italy this season is the matched-up man.

Up to now the average citizen has been almost pitifully unmatched. His shirt bore no real relationship to his trousers and he was bisected conspiculously in the middle by a leather belt.

This summer, though, the streets of Rome have started to bloom suddenly with men who are designed all in one from neck to shoes. It's a marvelous switch.

The matched-up man is the brainchild of Carlo Palazzi. "I thought it might be fun to start for warm weather," he says, "but it has turned into something much more serious."

Palazzi's first match-ups were the printed voile shirts and the heavier linen slacks in a matching print that have appeared every day at the fashion shows and at night at the top outdoor restaurants here.

For fall Palazzi will forget the prints and dress the matched-up man in wools and jersey. He has designed a brown jersey shirt and pants to be worn under a brown and white check wool jacket.

Carlo Palazzi's shop here is always full of women, who aren't shopping for their husbands. They are yearning for everything in the place and they are welcome to buy. But Palazzi doesn't like to design for them.

Though the collection he showed here last week was definitely his and hers, he says, "I don't enjoy making women's fashions. I have one feeling. As far as I'm concerned the best I can do is to turn a few men's fashions into something they can wear."

Crux Case Moved to Fall After Two-Sided Request

NASSAU (CP) — Canada's courtroom battle to extradite Vancouver lawyer-financier A. G. Duncan Crux from the Bahamas was adjourned Friday to Oct. 1.

Magistrate John Baily decided on the eight-week break after both sides had made adjournment requests. Crux, 63, has been charged in British Columbia with 21 fraud and theft charges involving about $1,000,000. Crux is the former head of the Commonwealth Group of companies.

Just before the adjournment, both Crux and Patrick Toothe, representing Canada in the case, completed submissions on three theft-by-conversion charges on which British Columbia hopes to try Crux.

In making his adjournment request, Crux said the next bundle of depositions to be dealt with involves matters in Switzerland, which created difficulties in getting material for the defence. Crux asked for an adjournment of not less than two months.

However, he said he would like to see the proceedings dealt with quickly as "my entire business career is entirely disrupted and to be charged with these offences is most embarrassing to me in every possible way."

He said he also needed time to prepare for a mandamus writ hearing in the Bahamas Supreme Court. Canada will seek an order forcing the magistrate to rescind two earlier rulings, including his refusal to allow extradition on 10 counts against Crux of filing false company prospectuses.

Toothe said his position had always been that the extradition proceedings should not continue until his mandamus application had been heard and ruled upon.

The magistrate said although he had ordered earlier that the case proceed despite the mandamus hearing, he had since decided upon a compromise to give Toothe "a sporting chance."

Rochester

EDMONTON (CP) — Col. D. H. Rochester, 51, commander of the Canadian Airborne Regiment, retired Friday rather than leave his regiment.

Rochester, commander since the regiment was formed in 1967, was to have left the Edmonton headquarters to become commander of the Pacific region, based in Vancouver.

"Not being allowed to serve the last year with my regiment is the saddest part of my career," he said in an interview.

Col. R. G. Therriault, 41, of Quebec City, will assume command of the regiment.

Toronto-born Rochester, a bachelor, was commanding officer of 57 Field Squadron in Korea in 1950 and received the OBE for his service.

In the early 1960s, he was commander of the Canadian Brigade unit, United Nations Emergency Force in the Gaza Strip.

He joined the Canadian Army in 1941 as a Royal Canadian Engineers lieutenant.

In 1964, Rochester returned from Egypt to become commandant of the Royal Canadian School of Mechanical Engineering at Chilliwack, B.C.

Every Woman May Now Quickly

LIFT HER FACE OUT OF SUMMER LINES, WRINKLES and Aging DRYNESS

thanks to the "European Discovery" CEF-600

Helps Every Complexion Regain and Retain The Younger Look by Immediately Counteracting Effects of the Hot Parching Sun

No matter if skin is typed dry, normal or even oily . . . . no matter whether you tan gently or burn easily . . . the summer sun dehydrates, drains skin of water and deprives it of the necessary moisture that pushes skin up and out to keep it as smooth, firm and wrinkle-free as the day you were married. And now, on holiday when you particularly want to look your youngest best, the summer sun works overtime to dry out and make your skin on face and neck flabby, sagging, rough and weatherbeaten. You look and feel years older than your age. And your husband . . . It makes him feel older too! For a convincing free trial of 2ND DEBUT with CEF 600 please send 25c to 2ND DEBUT Dept. VC-5, 941 Queen Street East, Toronto 8, Ontario.

Your One and Only Chance For Quick Summer Youth

Medical journals have acclaimed the "European Discovery" known scientifically as CEF 600 and now embodied as the active ingredient in the cosmetic-like lotion named "2ND DEBUT."

Apply "2ND DEBUT" nightly before retiring and daily before make-up. Day and night, it is constantly carrying water into the skin . . . counteracting all the skin drying effects of the hot summer sun that parches, dries, wrinkles your skin and makes it sag.

How 2ND DEBUT Works Quickly

Once again skin is moisturized, fresh, dewey, radiant. Once again those aging lines and wrinkles are pushed up and out. Once again skin on face and throat is smooth and years younger in appearance. No matter how tan your complexion may be, a youth-like color glows from within. Your complexion seems to have been born beautiful. Only 2ND DEBUT can bring about this fantastic skin youthifying miracle . . . in spite of the drying summer sun!

For Extra Dry Skin . . . Or Mi-Lady In A Hurry . . . 2ND DEBUT with double strength CEF 1200

Now DOUBLE STRENGTH 2ND DEBUT contains CEF 1200 instead of CEF 600. It acts much faster to smooth and flatten skin made scaly by the summer sun . . . and it works quicker to push up and out the more deeply sealed lines and wrinkles.

IMPORTANT TO REGULAR USERS OF 2ND DEBUT

Particularly in these summer months, in time will your skin revert to the tired and wrinkled condition it was, unless you keep using 2ND DEBUT day and night. Your skin is constantly exfoliating . . . old skin flakes off and away and new skin is constantly being born. In summer weather it is more important than ever that you keep applying 2ND DEBUT before retiring and before make-up if you want to retain your soft, smooth, youthful looking complexion. Users of 2ND DEBUT with CEF 600 are urged to switch to 2ND DEBUT with CEF 1200 . . . double strength and to use it all summer long.

British Columbia's tough pollution control laws will get even tougher

Return the Bennett Team!

In 1956, the Social Credit Government was one of the first governments in North America to enact pollution control legislation.

It was the first provincial government in British Columbia's history to undertake a solution to Vancouver's sewage problem by making possible the multi-million dollar Iona Treatment Plant.

The standards of effluent control for recently constructed pulp mills are among the highest in the world, and an all-out effort is being made to curb air pollution with strict new air purity standards and continuous air sampling such as those done at 14 stations and 2 laboratories in the Lower Mainland. By 1971, these laws will be further strengthened by a broad new air pollution control program that will cover domestic burning, motor vehicles and industries.

The objectives are the preservation of British Columbia's magnificent natural environment, fish and wildlife, and the protection of recreation facilities and public health with the highest pollution control standards of any region in North America.

Feed from Top

The other day we were discussing the application of a top dressing to the lawn in order to maintain a high level of humus in the soil and to create a texture and environment favorable to the health of the grasses.

I think most good gardeners these days accept the idea of a top dressing for lawns in addition to the usual fertilizer, but it isn't so generally realized that other plants besides grass benefit from this treatment.

There are quite a few common plants that produce an abundance of fibrous feeding roots quite close to the soil surface — and in some cases, these roots actually become exposed. This is bad business if they are not covered promptly.

The cucumber is a good example. It is quite a common thing to find their white roots peeping through the soil surface, and the top dressing in this case should be really rich — old and mellow rotted manure is ideal — for the cucumber is a hungry feeder.

The cuke's close relatives too — squash, marrow, melon, pumpkin, gourds — all have the same shallow-rooting habit and all appreciate a generous top dressing, especially when the fruits are swelling.

Another candidate for top dressing is the strawberry, for these plants have a tendency to heave themselves up out of the ground, or perhaps the soil washes away, leaving some of the roots exposed.

Whatever the reason, this should be corrected, preferably with a mixture of good topsoil and old but strawy manure, tucked in cosily around each plant to cover all exposed roots. Try not get any soil into the growing point of the plant, though, for the crowns have a habit of rotting if buried. The best time to topdress strawberries is shortly after the cropping is finished.

Lily of the valley is another heaver-upper, and it is quite a common thing to find the plants shouldering one another out of the ground after two or three years. This plant, a native of open woodland, has a great fondness for rotted leaves, and if you raked up and saved your fallen leaves last autumn, the bottom layer of your leaf pile should be in nice condition for spreading over the lily of the valley bed.

If no flaky leafmould or ripe compost is available, use rotted manure or woodsy topsoil, and follow this up next spring with a little fertilizer in water applied with a watering can. Under this treatment, the plants should bloom their heads off.

If you have any true lilies in your garden, it is important to watch them closely for the appearance of surface roots. Quite a few of our most popular varieties — not all of them — are what we call stem rooters; that is, they push out a second set of roots from the stem at or just above soil level, usually a little after midsummer. These plants will never put their best foot forward unless a pile of rich soil or a soil and manure mixture is mounded up around the base of the stems, covering these stem roots.

Some of the older and more permanent houseplants can do with a topdressing too. In this case, scrape away a little of the old surface soil, being careful not to disturb any roots, replacing the removed soil with a soil and manure mixture.

One of the most interesting of all our local flower shows opens this afternoon in the G. R. Pearkes Arena, 3100 Tillicum Road. This is the 23rd annual show of the Victoria Gladiolus and Dahlia Society, and doors will be open from 2 to 10 p.m. today and from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. tomorrow. An auction sale of the exhibited blooms will be held at closing time tomorrow. Admission is 50 cents, and coffee and snacks are available on the premises.

Worms Close Gap

The man who must be credited with saving civilization as we know it is, of course, the noted explorer, Dr. Mark Hawkins.

It was a lovely June day in the foothills of the Himalayas when Dr. Hawkins broke through a jungle-overgrown passage and found himself in the undiscovered Vale of Aehren-di-piddy.

He was welcomed to the lush green valley by the patriarch of the Aehren-di-piddians, U Phorea. For several days, he enjoyed studying the simple natives — the solemn and somewhat pompour older people and the nodding, smiling, invariable polite younger people.

But as the days passed an uneasy feeling came over him that something was drastically wrong.

"It's these young people," he said to himself, "they're so . . ." And then it dawned on him. "Good Lord! I think I've stumbled on a culture unique on our planet. It has no generation gap!"

To confirm his suspicions, Dr. Hawkins cornered U Phorea and fired a salvo of questions:

"Tell me," he asked, "what do you do about riots?"

"What's a riot?" asked U Phorea.

"How about the younger generation's music? Does it shatter your ear drums?"

★ ★ ★

"But they play only our music and only the songs we request," said U Phorea with surprise.

"Now when they interrupt you . . ."

"Do they serve willingly in the army?"

"Enthusiastically. The are proud to kill whomever we tell them to kill."

"But do they never protest injustice or poverty?"

"Oh, my, no. They realize we elders will deal with such problems wisely in good time."

"One last question. When they ask for the family ox cart on Saturday night . . ."

"Never. They much prefer to walk."

Dr. Hawkins, his suspicions confirmed, sought desperately for the key to such harmony between the generations. "It must be in the different way they raise their children," he thought.

But he found that children, on reaching puberty, were placed in an institution for four years where they learned to count backward from a million by threes, played simple games before admiring parents, and swallowed goldfish.

"No differences there," he said, shaking his head. And the secret remained hidden until one day he witnessed a baptism ceremony on the banks of the River Leathey. Mud, crawling with little worms, was being smeared on the foreheads of every child.

"Ah, yes," said U Phorea. "The Lobhat worms crawl painlessly through the skull and destroy evil spirits."

"Eureka!" said Dr. Hawkins.

Lobhat worms proved an instant success in the civilized world. Soon, not a teenager lived who hadn't been forcibly baptized. The world had never seen a more docile, unprotesting, agreeable generation.

Several scientists warned that Lobhat worms, in effect, performed crude prefrontal lobotomies on the subjects. But they were paid little heed.

"At long last, the generation gap is close," parents, educators and politicians alike cried happily. "Our children are just like us."

9 IN MEMORIAM

DAVIES—For Gary, who is so terribly missed, Aug. 9, 1967.
As I lie beneath this hot, dusty land
I wonder if I have died in vain,
Or if by chance and from love of God
That they will gain,
By my undertaking.

Let my family grow close
I pray, they love one another,
Let my offspring grow to understand
That it is love of God and man alone
That build this world so grand.

Maybe in shame, maybe in sorrow
Their heads will bow in sadness,
But before they hurt one another
Sister, brother, husband, wife or Mother
They will think of this
My undertaking.
—Gord, Ann and children.

"This program is being beamed to our armed forces in the Sea of Tranquillity."

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Friday's French-fried answer—Chapter four of the week-long series of non-political political questions concerned George Pearkes, the last federal cabinet minister from Vancouver Island, and the three ministers right now, Jack Davis, Ron Basford and Arthur Laing. I'm not being conservative when I call that a liberal trio.

Today's question is the last on politics for a few days and a dandy. Which of Canada's prime ministers was the nation's first labor minister and which helped write the first closure rule for the House of Commons in 1913? Answers Tuesday.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

This deal was played in an international pair championship in Geneva. The declarer muddled the play slightly and failed to profit from the fact that the opponents' diamond winners were blocked.

The bidding:

1 ♠     2 ♡     Pass    4 ♡
All pass

Opening lead: Spade eight

A spade was led against South's contract of four hearts and East took the ace and king. Then he cashed the singleton diamond ace. As he could see there was no future in any other return, East exited with a third round of spades, presenting South with a ruff and discard.

South was very pleased with this development since he was able to ruff on the table with the ninespot, at the same time dumping a diamond from his own hand. South imagined he could now make the contract by discarding his remaining diamond on dummy's clubs after drawing trumps.

This dream was shattered when the declarer found that after ruffing East's spade return on the table he couldn't get back to his own hand to draw trumps. If he overtook the trump jack, West's ten would be promoted. There was no way of avoiding the loss of a trump trick and therefore South was defeated.

The declarer would have made this contract if he had assumed that the opponents were defending correctly, as was likely in a game of this standard. The fact that East had deliberately chosen to concede a ruff-and-discard suggested that he knew the clubs were likely to be worth four tricks and also that the trumps might be breaking badly.

Therefore the declarer should have ruffed the third round of spades in his own hand. Whether West overruffs or not, the trumps can be cleared and the contract made by discarding two diamonds on the clubs.

You don't have to go at the moon to find the Sea of Tranquility. This property is it. It defies description. I don't think I have ever seen such a lovely setting or such a beautifully built home. And can you imagine coming home for a quick supper, jumping into the boat and catching your limit of salmon just 50' offshore. The owner did, night before last. You enter the property down a winding blacktopped driveway through shade maples, and firs of the greenest green. At the beach end, in a clearing with garages, workshop, garden sheds, are two lovely homes. One rents for $200 per month. The owners home, right adjacent is customized. The kitchenette and eating area are compact and face the sea. The living room is 20'x33' with wall-to-wall carpet and 18' Roman Brick raised hearth ranch fireplace. Under the W-W carpeting is flooring never walked on. The two bedrooms of medium size are so restful. The den is sunken — 18'x27' with a floor to ceiling fireplace that is unique. It has a curved facing and copper hood. You step through the sliding glass doors onto the sundeck over the boathouse — 15'x30'. And, over all the house is a beautiful shake roof. If you want a beautiful home with an income, on a private waterfront setting, (in which case you could use the guest cottage as a two-bedroom annex), please phone for appointments to view. Trades considered.

Angry Mob Shouts Down Pierre

'Dictatorship Seed' Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was pelted with papers and a banana peel Friday night by an angry crowd of war protesters that smashed a window and set a fire at the Seaforth Armory where he was speaking.

Chanting "Trudeau is a traitor," about 300 placard-carrying demonstrators pounded on the armory doors shortly after the prime minister entered the building to attend a Liberal fund-raising dinner.

The prime minister went inside surrounded by security men after he was unsuccessful in an attempt to speak to the demonstrators from the top of a sound truck.

* * *

After arriving, Mr. Trudeau hopped up on a sound truck and attempted to speak to the demonstrators, mostly young people. He was hit in the back by a banana peel and others threw wads of paper at him.

He jumped off the truck and was whisked inside after shouts and screams prevented him from being heard. Some of the demonstrators followed him up to the door and pounded on it.

Others broke a window in the armory. The crowd quieted a few minutes later and moved across the street ota park where they ate rice and drank tea.

* * *

A heap of paper and cardboard was set ablaze a few feet from the armory door. The blaze was extinguished by police a few seconds later.

Inside the armory, the 1,100 dinner guests were eating roast Long Island duck with orange sauce.

The demonstrators carried signs reading "Our PET is a male chauvinist pig," "End Canada's Complicity in Vietnam," "No money, no education, we need jobs or an education."

The unidentified girl who hit the prime minister with the banana peel carried one reading: "Hustle grain, not

'Do You Have to Be President of U.S.?'

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A commissionaire at the Abbotsford International Air Show firmly blocked the way Friday when a man attempted to follow Prime Minister Trudeau and his party of cabinet ministers as they retired to an office area.

"How do you get identified?" the man asked. "Do you have to be president of the United States?"

'Like V-E at Ogden Point'

Russians Fined, Cheered

Two Soviet fishing vessels were warmly cheered by thousands of Victorians when they sailed from Ogden Point just before 10 p.m. Friday after the two skippers had been fined $2,500 each on charges of fishing within Canada's 12-mile limit.

The fines were levied in Victoria provincial court Friday afternoon by Judge William Ostler following a trial.

"It was like V-E Day at Ogden Point," photographer Jim Ryan said. "There were people with children, with baby carriages and babes in arms."

● Davis wants to see Soviet catch pictures. Page 21

"Girls were kissing and hugging the Russian seamen. The Russians were giving kids apples and older people Russian cigarettes. They invited people aboard the trawlers to look around. The whole area was jammed with cars and people."

Mr. Ryan said he heard one small child say to his mother "Mummy, they don't look very mean to me."

* * *

One of the Russian crewmen told a fisheries officer in broken English that "if you ever come into our territory, all we'll do is get you drunk," the photographer said.

George Dawson of King Bros., ship agents, said he felt the events at the dock "cemented good relations in some manner with the Russians."

"They met a lot of people and when they left they were cheered. It was a very friendly demonstration."

The ships were under orders to return directly to Russia, where, according to one of the skippers, we will face another trial.

* * *

The trial of Capt. Edward John Morozov, 29, of the Soviet fishing vessel Gherman Titov resumed Friday with the defence calling as its first witness Capt. Boris Rolenko, 28, master of the second Soviet trawler, the Kouzachin.

Both trawlers, of the side dragger type, were seized Aug. 4 and escorted to Victoria by the Canadian Fisheries patrol vessel Howay, under the command of Capt. Chesley Power.

The charges of fishing within Canada's 12-mile limit were laid under the Canadian Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, which provides for a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine and confiscation of the vessel or the catch or both.

* * *

Judge William Ostler ruled at the start of the trial Thursday that the Soviet captains would be tried separately. However, when the trial of Capt. Morozov ended Friday, counsel for both sides agreed the evidence submitted in the Morozov case be accepted as applying to the Rolenko case. Judge Ostler then pronounced sentence.

Capt. Rolenko testified the Soviet fleet, of which the Gherman Tivov and Kouzachin were a part, moved from its winter fishing grounds in the Bering Strait to fish off Oregon and the west coast of Vancouver Island in April this year.

Through two court interpreters, he described the fishing operation of the Soviet trawlers in some detail. It was the policy of the Soviet fleet, he said, to set nets at a distance of about 1.5 miles on the international side of the Canadian limit and then head out to sea.

He did not deny being in Canadian waters when the Howay pulled alongside the Soviet vessels at 7:19 a.m. Monday.

Smaller Profits Just One Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday the federal government will apply voluntary restraints urged by the Economic Council of Canada by curtailing inflationary trends in the government itself.

Asked if he thought voluntary curbs could work, the prime minister said: "I'm saying it's a first start and I'm saying that as a government we are going to apply that voluntary restraint. (See also Page 5)

"In our case, in the case of the government, it will mean curtailing many different programs. We'll tell the people that they can't at the same time complain about inflation and then ask for the government to be spending more money . . ."

The prime minister said getting people "to face their responsibilities" would be a government responsibility.

"For businessmen this will mean instead of increasing the prices it could mean reducing the profits," he said.

Air Dive Fatal As Trudeau Attends Show

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A young American pilot was killed Friday when his home-built aircraft crashed half a mile from where Prime Minister Trudeau and six cabinet ministers were watching an air show.

The Mini-Mustang, piloted by Scott Nelskog, 20, of Edmonds, Wash., dived into the ground just after Mr. Trudeau, in 80-degree weather, opened the Abbotsford international air show.

The tiny, 85-horsepower plane was one of two performing before Mr. Trudeau and a crowd of 40,000. It completed a roll and nose-dived into the ground from 200 feet.

* * *

There was no fire and most of the crowd were not aware of the crash until emergency vehicles raced to the scene.

It was the first fatal accident in the popular air show's eight-year history.

Mr. Trudeau arrived by helicopter from Vancouver to open the three-day show, North America's largest, 40 miles east of Vancouver.

It is expected to draw more than 300,000 people by the time the show ends Sunday.

The prime minister spent about three hours there. After viewing the Bell 206-A turbine helicopter, he made his way through a jostling crowd, which gave him a quiet greeting, clapping and whistling.

* * *

Security was tight. At one stage, Mr. Marchand, who was not wearing an identity badge, was refused admission to the second-floor office area from which the prime minister's party watched the show.

PARIS (AP) — France, bowing to pressures inside and outside the country, devalued the franc by 12½ per cent Friday.

The immediate result makes French goods more competitive in world trade, promising better stability to the economy, but the over-all effect may be to bring other nations' currencies under pressure and throw the international monetary situation into confusion.

Britain officially sought to dispel any thoughts of a new devaluation of the pound.

NOT SO SURE

"We have no comment except to rule out any possibility of Britain following France," said a treasury spokesman in London. Others there were not so sure.

Sir George Bolton, chairman of the Bank of London and South America, commented:

"The French devaluation will cause another period of anxiety among the leading foreign currencies. If any leading currency is devalued for domestic rea-

Plane Lost In Fraser

A ferry attendant on the Fraser River near Big Bar Creek in the B.C. Chilcotin has reported a light aircraft hitting the aerial cable of the ferry at around 7:45 p.m. Friday and going into the river, the Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Vancouver reported.

Number of people on board or the destination of the aircraft is not known. RCMP will start dragging operations early today.

Campground Shootup Fatal to Five

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—A shooting spree which authorities said apparently erupted from an attempted eviction left five persons dead, including the alleged gunman, his parents and a minister, at a church campground in a Birmingham suburb Friday.

Police said Charles Hagood, 33, who lived at the campground, was believed to have done the shootings, which also injured a sixth person. Hagood's body was found in the house when officers rushed him.

Mild Quake Rocks India

NEW DELHI (UPI)—A mild earthquake shook New Delhi and other sections of north India Friday. There were no reports of injuries or damage. The weather office said the tremor was centered 620 miles northwest of New Delhi.

Quality Standards Now Official

Pure Water Rules Old Hat Here

By IAN STREET

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark says the province's new water quality standards which were officially proclaimed Friday had already been in effect in Greater Victoria for the past three months.

He said the new standards, produced after many months of work, were already being enforced and had been for some time. Medical health officers in Greater Victora and elsewhere were made aware in advance of the major provisions.

"So far as domestic sewage is concerned," said Mr. Loffmark, "there will be no change in my 'stand, and municipalities can continue to expect that I will insist upon treatment of sewage before discharge, with the single exception of the outfall at Macaulay Point."

"In no case," he said, "is it intended that the standards will authorize discharge that will bring the receiving body of water up to the minimum level.

"Where the quality of water is presently well within the accepted level, it will be expected to remain so."

At a press conference Friday, Victoria Socred candidates Trade Minister Waldo Skillings and Public Works Minister W. N. Chant both endorsed the new water quality standards. Mr. Chant said his department was spending up to $300,000 on construction of a sewer line serving the new Victoria Vocational School and Glendale Hospital, to prevent further pollution of the Gorge.

Mr. Loffmark said the purpose of the new standards was to secure and maintain such water quality levels in the province, both for drinking waters and surface waters, as would give assured protection for human health and safety.

The document has been drawn up in a form that will permit modification and amendment as new information becomes available.

The document states the policy of the health branch regarding all surface, ground and salt waters is to encourage programs which will provide waters of the best

Israel Getting More Phantoms

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States plans to deliver four Supersonic F-4 Phantom jets to Israel next month and will complete delivery of a shipment of 50 of the high-performance fighter-bombers within a year, authoritative sources said Friday.

U.S. Surplus Stock Growing

Wheat War Near

From Reuters

Official sources in Washington said Friday hopes are rapidly dwindling that a world wheat price war can be averted.

The U.S. has a greater stock of surplus wheat than any of the other major world suppliers. Officials here said the U.S. may be forced to strike a fatal blow at the IGA because the wheat crisis is as bad as it was a month ago when the U.S. called top officials from other major exporters to Washington to search for a solution within the IGA's structure.

★ ★ ★

Events of the last month have shown that a meeting of representatives from the U.S., Canada, Australia, Argentina, and the European Common Market failed to produce a workable solution.

Subsequent actions supposedly based on agreements reached at the meeting have generated recrimination and unscheduled counter-actions by others, particularly the European Common Market.

Price reductions by the U.S. and Canada— declared by them to have been approved at the meeting — brought protest, agreement-breaking charges and, fairly speedily, retaliatory price cuts by the ECM.

From the U.S. standpoint, not only has the ECM action negated the benefits derived from its own price reductions but in many of its prime selling areas has left U.S. prices in a worse competitive position than before it took its so-called "price corrective" action.

Moreover, because of alleged side agreements with competitors such as the ECM, the U.S. price cuts were confined to selected markets only, primarily Western Europe.

That led to charges of discrimination from buyers who were overlooked, including two of the biggest customers for U.S. wheat — Japan and Brazil. Both have refused to buy any U.S. wheat since the price adjustments were made July 18.

Japan, the biggest cash buyer of U.S. wheat, has adamantly declared it will buy no more from the U.S. until the U.S. does lower its prices. It backed up that declaration by announcing Friday a new wheat buying policy, throwing open its market, starting next week, to all comers providing their price was acceptable.

Officials here are uncertain just when and in what shape the next U.S. move will be. They do concede however that something will have to be done very soon.

A disastrous year last season, when U.S. exports slumped to their lowest point in a decade, left surplus stocks when the new season started July 1 at an embarrassing four-year high of 810,600,000 bushels, 34 per cent more than a year earlier.

Apart from raising an official dilemma about how much the acreage permitted to be sown to wheat for 1970 harvest should be cut back — a decision which already is running nearly two months late — grumblings for action from outside the administration are rapidly turning into expressions bordering on disgust.

With U.S. wheat exports in the first month of the new season already running well behind last year's poor results, exporters are asking how much "lost business" does Washington consider sufficient to warrant some action.

Frustration over what officials and traders alike describe as a "stalemate" situation already is being echoed in the U.S. Senate, where last week Senator Jack Miller (Rep.—Iowa) renewed demands for U.S. withdrawal from the IGA.

It is apparent that, from the administration's standpoint, it would prefer the U.S. not to have to make the next move.

★ ★ ★

Observers in Washington feel, however, that at the rate pressure for action is mounting, preferences, like some agreements, may have to be placed aside, especially when the circumstances in which they were conceived have completely changed.

After Interior Tour

CP, from Vancouver

Liberal leader Pat McGeer has returned here after two weeks of campaigning in the Interior, claiming the Grits will win more than the 20 seats he has predicted in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

Dr. McGeer said his tour of the Interior has shown him that Liberal organizations in ridings virtually written off two weeks ago now are fighting to win.

"We are going to come back and hit very hard at these swing ridings," he said. "These seats are now so much in the fight I think we are going to win them."

He named Okanagan North and Shuswap, which he visited twice, as two such ridings. Minister Without Portfolio Pat Jordan held Okanagan North in the last House and Social Credit's Willis Jefcoat held Shuswap.

Dr. McGeer said his new-found confidence comes from reports he receives daily from constituency organizations and by the enthusiastic reception he says he gets while mainstreeting.

"This is no longer just a handshake and a polite hello. Now there are smiles and waves and people are telling me all the time they hope we will win."

Scott

Independent Granddad Runs as Voice of Youth

Victoria's "lighthouse philospher," Bill Scott, has thrown his hat into the provincial election, and will contest the Socred-held riding of Victoria as an independent.

Running on a campaign platform of the "voice for youth," the 71-year-old grandfather of five says a country is "only as good as its students and teachers."

★ ★ ★

"I feel present-day Canada belongs to its youth and it should have a bigger voice in Canada than it has at the present time," Mr. Scott said on announcing his candidacy.

Asked if he were a serious candidate, Mr. Scott said "certainly I am interested in winning . . . I'll be the mouthpiece for youth . . . I've always been a serious candidate . . ."

Mr. Scott, who has carried his ideas — ranging from an "intellectual Olympic Games to a Maple Leaf Guard matching China's Red Guard — across Canada and to many of Britain's universities, calls himself an Anglo-Chinese-Canadian. He spent 22 years in China as a lighthouse keeper and has lived the past 23 years in Victoria.

Mr Scott has run in so many elections he can't remember them all, and his face is as well known as his aphorisms.

Skillings Lashes Ottawa Designation

Kootenays Incentives 'Breach of Faith'

The federal government was accused Friday by Trade Minister Waldo Skillings of a breach of faith in designating a section of southeastern B.C. as eligible for incentives to attract new industry.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Skillings said he discussed the matter with Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand in Ottawa some six weeks ago and told him B.C. felt all sections should be treated equally.

★ ★ ★

"It was my impression that there would be no designated areas as such, at least until after further consultation with the provinces. Now they have unilaterally made a decision that in my books is just as bad as the previous one which designated the Okanagan an area to receive federal incentives.

★ ★ ★

"We believe that each and every part oof the province should have the same chance for federal incentives based upon the merits of its case."

The minister added: "Why shouldn't the Cariboo, Prince Rupert or Terrace or Campbell River, for that matter, not receive the same incentives that the federal government is willing to give to new industry to locate in the Kootenays?"

Soviet Skippers Fined, Cheered

While the position fixes taken by Second Officer Raymond Maratos on the Howay placed the Soviets at 9.7 miles offshore, or 2.3 miles inside Canadian waters, the Soviet captain said his own position fix placed him 1.1 miles from the spot marked on the Howay's charts, still 1.2 miles inside the Canadian limit.

Lawyer Harold Dean of Vancouver, representing the Soviet captains, said there was no question as to the ships being in Canadian waters, but added that he hoped to show they were there unwillingly.

Chief Officer Victor Sankov of the Kouzachin testified he was in charge of the bridge at 5 a.m. and was setting the trawl about 1.5 miles outside Canadian waters when the net did not move out as intended, but remained beneath his ship.

The Kouzachin was in danger of wrapping the net about its propellers if it tried moving forward, he said. Over the next two hours the two Soviet vessels tried to get out of the predicament by transferring lines and performing manoeuvres.

An onshore current and undertow he was not familiar which caused the ships to drift at a rate of about three knots, he said. Sankov said his problems were compounded by the fact his vessel had no clutch, which meant manoeuvres were constantly slowed by the need to turn engines off each time he wanted to reverse or go forward.

The crown, represented by Victoria lawyer R. B. Hutchison, established that no distress signals were flown, however, even though the flags were available on the ships.

Judge Ostler asked Sankov why, as given in earlier testimony, he had waited until 7:20 a.m. before calling Capt. Morozov. The chief officer said he had not felt the ship itself was in any danger, in spite of the troubles he was experiencing.

After a recess called by Judge Ostler, the court resumed shortly after 4 p.m. with a statement from the defence. Mr. Dean said he had planned to call more witnesses, but was afraid the case would be adjourned to Monday. He said each day in port cost his clients from $3,000 to $5,000, and they could not afford a weekend adjournment.

Judge Ostler said he could offer no sympathy, as he had not been consulted as to court arrangements.

In his summation, Mr. Dean said it was unfortunate the ships had drifted into Canadian waters, but it was the result of troubles experienced. He argued that the accused were not guilty of fishing as there were no fish in the net when it was drawn in, and no fish in the holds when the trawlers were inspected in Victoria. The Soviets had only been concerned with getting their net untangled and out of Canadian waters, he added, not with fishing.

Mr. Hutchison argued that the definition of the act of fishing covered any attempt to fish, whether successful or not, and commenced from the moment the line or net was placed in the water. The accused admitted they were in Canadian waters, he added, and had obviously been preparing to fish.

In passing sentence, Judge Ostler said the master of the Kouzachin should have been called to the bridge earlier. He said he found it hard not to believe the real reason he was called was because of the arrival of the Howay on the scene.

"It is a master's duty to assure the bridge is in capable, experienced hands when he leaves it," he said. The ship was "too close to Canadian waters to allow for any difficulties," he added, and the trouble experienced had not been an act of God but the result of maritime immaturity on the part of the chief officer.

Trudeau's Conference

Cost Cuts Wednesday?

CP, from Ottawa

Prime Minister Trudeau has scheduled a news conference for next Wednesday evening and there is speculation he will use the occasion to announce government spending cuts.

Trudeau told a news conference last Wednesday major cuts in government spending can be expected next month. He said the cabinet intends that government departments, and not the taxpayers, should feel the effects of inflation.

In its examination, the cabinet has devoted special attention to public works programs to ensure that only necessary projects are undertaken. All cabinet ministers were reported to have been told to make exhaustive studies of departmental estimates with a view to recommending cuts.

There is also widespread speculation that the cabinet will recommend staff reductions in certain public service establishments. Sources say this would take the form of extending the present program of not filling all vacancies as they occur.

The sources say the current review of the government's social welfare program — including family allowances — is not directly associated with the plan to cut spending. The welfare review is mainly concerned with the efficiency and effectiveness of various programs.

New Figures Due On Branch Lines?

CP, from Ottawa

New cost and loss figures on 53 branch lines the railways claim are uneconomic may be submitted to the Canadian Transport Commission as the result of a commission ruling Friday.

The commission's railway committee issued orders setting more specific rules for railway accounting of operating and imbedded expenses.

The railways are to submit new costing manuals within 30 days, based on the commission's orders. Opponents will be given a chance to state their views on the manuals before they are approved.

The orders, backed by a 50,000-word statement of reasons, are an attempt to put an end to arguments that began in the late 1950s before the royal commission on transportation headed by the late M. A. MacPherson.

The argument between the railways and other interested parties — the provinces, municipalities and principal shippers — was over the proper methods of accounting for expenses involved in operating short branch lines as part of nation-wide railway networks.

Most of the branches the railways want to abandon are in Western Canada and run for 25 to 35 miles each.

The committee concluded, after lengthy hearings last year and months of intensive study by a special committee of technical experts, that there is a difference between the costs incurred in operating a branch line which is abandoned because of operating losses, and the costs incurred in continuing to operate the same line under a subsidy.

The commission has powers under the 1967 National Transportation Act to authorize abandonment or a subsidy to keep a line operating in the public interest.

The railways now receive general subsidies on an annually-declining scale. For 1969, they receive $82,000,000, but this will drop by $14,000,000 next year.

By next year, the specific subsidies for which they qualify may rise to that amount, whereupon the general subsidies will end.

The commission's costing formula is not as generous as the railways fought for in last year's hearings. However, it is unlikely to make dramatic change in any of the 53 applications which have been pending for three years.

If that is found to be the case, the commission then has to decide whether the line should be abandoned or continued under a subsidy. It also has to decide what subsidy should be paid.

The commission ruled, in effect, that there are different depreciation costs that could be allowed when a branch line is abandoned, as opposed to continuing under a subsidy.

It ruled that when a line or service is continued under a subsidy, the railway should be compensated for a return on the cost of the capital that might otherwise be salvaged if it were abandoned, and for a return on any new investment that might have to be made to maintain the service.

It decided that the rate of return for the Canadian Pacific should be "no lower than the composite embedded rate" of interest paid on CP's outstanding debt, and that the same rate should be applied to the Canadian National for all costing purposes under the Railway Act.

Of the 53 pending applications before the commission, 46 involve 1,517 miles in Western Canada, and seven involve 144 miles in Nova Scotia and Ontario. The CN and CP have a combined national mileage of about 43,000.

When the railways submit new or revised applications for permission to abandon lines, they will be required under the new rules to submit detailed figures on traffic revenues and costs — fugures that will have to comply with the new formula, and that will be made public.

Cox Adds 68 to Opening 66 For Three-Stroke CPGA Lead

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob Cox of Richmond opened up a three-stroke lead in the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship Friday by carding a four-under par 68 for a 36-hole total of 134.

SHARE THIRD

Sharing third place at 140 were Bob Panasiuk of Tecumseh, Ont., and Ron Willey, assistant-pro at Vancouver's Marine Drive Club. Panasiuk shot a 71 Friday while the steady Willey carded a second successive 70.

Stan Homenuik of Dauphin and Alvie Thompson of Thornhill, Ont., both matched Cox' round to reach the half-way mark of the $33,157 tournament at 141.

Also at 141 were Phil Giroux of Montreal and Doug Reid of Vancouver, who had second-round 70s, and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., who shot a 69.

"I was in a trap on two, buried the club in the sand and just got the ball out," Knudson said. Then I put it in the bunker on eight and left it there for a double bogey. I three-putted on 11 and again on 12.

"I've only made one putt in 36 holes, and that was yesterday."

But Knudson didn't have as much trouble as Neil Green, who started off with a 68 on Thursday. The Calgary pro shot himself out of any reasonable chance to be a contender with an 80.

MISSED SHORT ONE

Cox, who couldn't get anything down from more than eight feet Friday, started off with birdies on the first two holes. But he three-putted the par-five third hole, missing from less than a foot.

He got into trouble again on the 11th but an exceptional recovery was probably the turning point in his round.

COULDN'T SEE GREEN

"I couldn't see the green and I had to stand about a foot and a half below the ball," he said. "I had to cut the shot with a five iron to get around it, but I got it on."

The ball actually landed on a finger of the green and Cox had to chip over a fairway island to get at the pin. He punched the ball four feet short and while he missed the putt, he thankfully accepted the bogey five.

DISCARDED DRIVER

Balding discarded his driver early for the second time. He had the shaft patched up but hooked badly on two of his first three tee shots and again went the rest of the way using his No. 3 wood.

Balding three putted the ninth green and after taking a bogey on the 13th, three-putted again, from less than 20 feet, on the 11th for a double bogey.

"I wasn't struggling, I was just sort of staggering," he commented ruefully.

Panasiuk had trouble with the par-five holes, taking bogeys on the third and 18th, where he gambled on reaching the green after a hooked tee shot and put his ball in muddy rough beside a pond to the right of the green.

Bill Wakeham of Victoria remained as the Vancouver Island entrant with the best chance of getting one of the bigger cash awards. He shot a par 72 for a 143.

Americans Dominate B.C. Tennis Semis

Dodo Cheney of Santa Monica, Calif., won one title Friday and goes after two more today as play in the B.C. Open tennis championships reached the final day of competition at Victoria Racquet Club.

Mrs. Cheney combined with Helen McDowell to down the Victoria pair of Lavinia Greenwood and Ruth Trelawney, 6-0, 6-1, in the veterans doubles final Friday.

In the open singles, Mrs. Cheney beat Pat Bostrum of Seattle, 8-6, 1-6, 6-2, and will meet Mary Struthers of La Jolla, Calif., in the final. Miss Struthers eliminated another American, Barbara Grubb of Dallas, Tex., 6-3, 8-6, to gain the final berth.

Victoria's Sally Wood will meet Mrs. Cheney in the veterans singles final. Miss Wood defeated Mrs. Greenwood, 6-0, 6-0, for the chance in the final.

The Victoria pair of Theo Booker and Roger Skillings narrowly missed the final of the open mixed doubles when they were beaten by Diane Powell of Sacramento, Calif., and Craig Hardy of Tucson, Ariz., 6-4, 6-8, 9-7, in the semi-final. Mary McLean of San Antonio, Tex., and Tom Muench of San Francisco took the other final berth with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, victory over Miss Struthers and Frank Johnson.

In the open women's doubles, the mother-and-daughter team of Joanne and Mary Struthers will meet Evelyn Houseman and Miss Grubb of Dallas in the final.

In open men's singles, Hardy upset fourth-seeded Lew Grinnan of Dallas, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, and will meet fifth-seeded Pierce Kelley of Miami, Florida, who eliminated Muench, 5-7, 8-6, 7-5.

Montreal Hopes Dimmed

TORONTO (CP) — The National Football League will not expand into Canada "in the foreseeable future," United States professional football commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday in a telephone interview with CTV sports director John Esaw.

Rozelle, who called the foreseeable future at least five years, said Montreal has expressed interest in obtaining an NFL franchise, but the NFL is not interested in shifting a franchise to Canada.

Island Crew Wins in Italy

The 'little finals' were for crews ousted early from major competition. Grant Bestwick of Shawnigan was fourth in the singles sculls.

Phillie Pitchers Belted . . . . . . for Five Home Runs

Red Bats Continue to Boom

Juan Marichal said the other day he wouldn't mind being traded to Cincinnati Reds.

The San Francisco right-hander said he would ask for a $200,000 contract if it happened, but added that he wouldn't take a penny if he didn't win 30 games.

It was his way of paying homage to the most-powerful batting attack in recent major-league baseball history.

ON BATTING RAMPAGE

Short of calibre pitching, the Reds have pounded their way into the Western Division lead in the National League. They have a team batting average of almost .290, have scored more runs than any club in either league and their home-run total is already more than 20 above last year's total.

The Reds, whose batting order includes five players in the top 10 in their league and a sixth only a few points away, hit five home runs Friday night in demolishing Philadelphia Phillies, 12-5, on the strenth of two five-run innings.

They started modestly enough with Alex Johnson hitting a bases-empty homer in the first inning and Ted Savate connecting for a second run in the third.

CONSECUTIVE HOMERS

Lee May and Johnny Bench hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning and Pete Rose homered in the seventh inning during the second five-run burst.

Victory moved the Reds a half game ahead of Atlanta Braves, who split a double header with New York Mets, winning, 1-0, in 10 innings on a bases-loaded single by Felipe Alou after losing, 1-4.

San Francisco's third-place Giants slipped a game and a half off the pace by losing, 3-4, to St. Louis Cardinals, who got six-hit pitching from rookie Chuck Taylor and a game-deciding double from Tim McCarver.

Los Angeles Dodgers remained two games away from the Braves, ending a Chicago Cub win streak at seven games with a 5-0 victory fashioned behind the two-hit pitching of Bill Singer.

OAKLAND GAINS

In the American League, Oakland Athletics crept within a game and a half of Minnesota Twins in the Western Division.

Athletics scored three times in the 10th inning to defeat New York Yankees, 5-3, in the first game of a doubleheader. They lost the second when Al Downing, going the distance for the first time this season, shut them out, 5-0, on a four-hitter.

Basketball Leagues Study 'Cooperative Arrangement'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Presidents of the two U.S. professional basketball leagues issued a carefully worded statement Friday announcing they are exploring the possibility of a "co-operative arrangement" between the two.

The word "merger" was not used in the short, two-paragraph statement, but the release followed by only 10 days a report in the Los Angeles Times that the National Basketball Association and American Basketball Association would merge within 30 days.

"The form of such arrangements have not been agreed upon but it is hoped they will be shaped to conform to the needs of the various cities in the leagues, as well as to any applicable law," NBA-commissioner Walter Kennedy and ABA-commissioner James Gardner said in the joint statement.

The ABA, which has struggled through poor attendance in most of its 11 league cities through its only two seasons, has sought constantly a mutual player draft or an all-star game with the NBA, if not a merger itself.

Red Lion Wins Tourney Opener

Given a three-run cushion in the second inning, Nelson allowed Luckies their only run in the third inning when he walked Roy St. Denis and Larry Montgomery, the first two batters he faced. St. Denis scored on a fielder's choice. Nelson had another wild streak in the last inning, walking two more before Mike Rye came in to retire the last three batters.

Play continues today starting at 8 a.m. with Trail and Johnston Motors of Vancouver playing in the first of 14 games.

Home Lumber Pulls Upset

Braefoot U.C.T. compiled a 16-0 record in league play this season but the streak ended Friday night at Braefoot Park when Victoria Home Lumber opened the best-of-three city midget lacrosse final by scoring a 12-7 win.

Larry Walsh, who turned in a standout game in goal, and Al Francis, who had four goals and four assists, did most of the damage for the winners.

Denfords Edge Colwood

Frank Doherty reached second base on the error and scored on Paul Morrison's one-out single, only the third hit off losing-pitcher Jack Lundquist.

Sunday, Lake Cowichan and Century Inn will resume their 3-3 game from Thursday at 1 p.m. at Heywood Avenue Park and will play the second game of their semi-final game immediately after. Denford and Colwood play their second game starting at 3:00 and Lake Cowichan and Century Inn return for the third game of their series at 6:45.

Strawberry Cup Race . . . . . . at Western Tonight

Al Smith Returns to Speedway

Roy told his 33-year-old older brother to go ahead if he thought he could do the job in tonight's Strawberry Cup race.

And so for the second time in as many seasons, the exciting Victoria driver will end his "retirement."

He will pilot Roy's No. 7 car in an attempt to capture the Strawberry Cup for the third time.

"That will be a tough one to try and come back in," said owner Vantreight.

"There will be a bunch of hot dog racers out there but we are sure Alan can do the job. He's one of the most exciting drivers ever to race here and he's been keeping in touch and going to all the races."

While a victory in the Strawberry Cup would be most satisfactory, the race Al really wants to win is the Daffodil Cup event on the Labor Day weekend.

"Al has never won the Daffodil," said Vantreight. "But he's led it for more laps than anybody else since we put up the cup. He'll drive Albert's No. 8 car this year.

"He hoped to take the Daffodil last year and started out promisingly with a victory in the Tony Slogarth Memorial at Nanaimo, but Roy got the big one."

Cars from Seattle, Prince George and the Canadian American Modified Racing Association circuit will be competing with local drivers in the 30-lap Strawberry Cup event.

In addition Saturday, super stocks will have a 35-lap main event in the joint program which starts with time trials at 7 p.m. and the first race at 8:00.

History Falling

Sunlight falls on tumbling walls of Victoria's "big little department store" started by Jimmie Little 49 years ago at Quadra and Pembroke as wreckers clear site for new restaurant. Store pioneered long hours of shopping and was open from 9 a.m. till 2 a.m. including Sundays, from the start. Business was sold early this year and Mr. Little died in May in Hawaii.—(William E. Coed Slaying Case

Bluffing 'Bishop' Talks to Suspect

YPSILANTI, Mich. (UPI) — A man posing as an ordained bishop tricked jailers into letting him into the Washtenaw county jail for a two-hour talk with John Norman Collins, a college student charged with the murder of a young coed, police said Friday.

"This is fantastic," Ann Arbor Police Chief Walter Krasny said. Krasny confirmed that the immposter got by deputies and into the maximum security cell to see Collins.

The man was identified as Joseph Bartholomew Pasic, a self-styled bishop of the Doukhobors.

Police said Pasic marched into the county jail Monday dressed in what looked like clerical garb, presented credentials purporting to identify him as a bonafide bishop, and asked to see Collins.

Deputies inspected the papers, had him sign a register, and then asked the 22-year-old Collins if he wanted to see the man. "Yea, I'll see him," Collins was quoted as saying.

A deputy later asked Collins what they talked about. Collins would only say they chatted.

Collins is charged with the first-degree murder of Karen Sue Beineman, an 18-year-old Eastern Michigan University freshman, who was the seventh girl murder victim in this university area in two years.

Washtenaw county prosecutor William Delhey confirmed Pasic had been committed to the Ypsilanti state hospital as mentally ill in 1961. In 1963, a petition for Pasic's release on constitutional grounds was turned down by the county circuit court, but he was subsequently released by the hospital, Delhey said.

Sheriff Douglas Harvey said the man had been checked out in the past and did have credentials identifying him as a minister.

"By state law, I've got to let any minister in to see a prisoner any time he wants to," Harvey said. "The man was shook down by my Turnkeys and was allowed to talk with Collins through a screen. Collins said later that he doesn't want to talk with him again, so he hasn't been let back in."

Whole Town Kicks Habit of Smoking

The ones who smoked down to the wire drew frowns on disapproval from the central Iowa community's Cold Turkey Committee which has spearheaded the town's effort to kick the nicotine habit.

"I'm still puffing but time's getting short," said Mayor Dale Yount, a five-to-six-cigar-a-day man.

The deadline for quitting was 7 p.m. Smokers were urged to toss their cigarettes, cigars and pipes into a bonfire in the town square.

Dale Burger, 50, president of the 2,243-population town's service club, wasn't altogether happy about quitting but the pressure was on. "People don't like to see me smoke around here," said Burger, who started 34 years ago and was up to three packs of cigarettes a day before he gave it up.

Greenfield got the idea of giving up smoking en masse as a community project after it was chosen as one of the central Iowa locations for filming a movie about a little town that gets a $25,000,000 prize if all the residents foresake their nicotine habits.

Burger said he knew of only eight or 10 holdouts. "One of them was an 80 year old man who said it hasn't hurt him yet. Besides, he said he didn't want to live to be too old."

Cigarette displays in stores on the town square were draped with black crepe paper. Plastic covers were put on cigarette machines so it would be difficult — but still possible — to make purchases.

Signs on the main highway into town advised visitors that no smoking was appreciated.

The Cold Turkey Committee erected a giant cigarette in the square as a barometer to show how many people signed pledges to quit smoking or not to start.

Reporters View Moon Rock

Tiny, Shiny, Mysterious Holes

HOUSTON — There it was, Sample 10,020, big as life and twice as mysterious.

A genuine moon rock, about three inches by three inches, angular on one side rounded on the other, and twinkling from the reflections of tiny shiny particles.

Someone said it looked like an old-fashioned clinker, the kind that rolled out of a furnace bottom when you cleaned out the ashes.

And Dr. Jeffrey Warner, the geologist who showed reporters Friday their first moonrock, said earth rocks in New York City resemble the moon rock on display.

But resemble is all. No one knows what it is in the moon rock sample that glitters so strangely.

★ ★ ★

"It's a mystery," said Dr. William Greenwood, another geologist who has made preliminary examinations of the rock. "Everything about it is a mystery."

The rock was enclosed in a glass container behind a glass wall on the third floor of the Lunar Receiving Laboratory.

Dr. Warner said the sample probably contained the minerals feldspar, olivine and pyroxene.

Some of the tiny holes on the rock, he said, apparently were caused by the impact of high-velocity meteorites. Around them were white halos caused by the crushing impact.

What about the holes, the ones without white halos around them, someone asked the geologist.

Dr. Warner grinned. "Those are just whole holes," he said.

Only about 20 to 30 scientists and laboratory technicians had seen the moon rock before about 10 newsmen were brought into the viewing room.

Although the rock weighed only about two pounds, it was so hard that Warner said a person would have to strike it at least four or five times with a hammer to crack or break it.

He also said he had soon it in three different colors, depending on the intensity of the light. Friday it looked light gray with tinges of pink. Another time it looked plain and dark gray. Again, it had looked cocoa-brown, he said.

Whatever it looks like, the public probably won't see it or any other moon samples for months or more likely years — if ever.

But most of them have made it clear during the week they would much prefer to see one of the moon rocks.

Blood Test Key to Release

HOUSTON (AP) — Prebreakfast blood samples taken today from the Apollo 11 astronauts will be either their ticket out of quarantine to meet their public — or the key that locks them in isolation for more tests.

Doctors will examine Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin the first humans exposed to moon soil, in a search for any indication of disease from the moon.

If the tests turn up nothing, the astronauts and 20 persons quarantined with them in the Lunar Receiving Laboratory will be released late Sunday or early Monday morning.

If unexplained organisms or serious changes were found in the blood, the 23 in quarantine would remain isolated until the germs are either identified or cured. That might mean an indefinite stay in the isolation quarters.

Blood samples will also be taken from the 20 support personnel in the quarantine, but officials have said the astronauts are the true test for any moon microbes taking hold in humans.

Wheel Glow Halts Flight

EDMONTON (CP) — A DC-8 chartered aircraft with 160 persons on board was called back from takeoff at Edmonton international airport when an air traffic controller noticed a glow from the plane's wheels caused by a magnesium casting on a tire that had gone flat.

Airport manager W. A. Morley said the control tower alerted the pilot as the aircraft taxied down the runway. The plane stopped and two tires blew out.

Building Delayed

Although construction of five-storey provincial government building, near new Duncan courthouse, is well underway, project is six weeks behind schedule because of lack of skilled craftsmen. About 85 men are working on structure which will cost $833,000. Officials hope it will be possible to catch up and finish by January deadline.—(Klaus Muenter)

Davis Wonders About 'Silvery Fish'

Photograph Study Ordered In Fishing Fleet Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis is hoping that some photographs will help him to decide what a Russian fishing fleet is up to on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The pictures were taken by commercial photographers from an Argus aircraft which flew Mr. Davis from Comox Wednesday on an inspection tour of the Soviet fleet.

Mr. Davis said he has ordered more intensive studies of the aerial pictures.

"We saw large piles of fish, separated in heaps, aboard the Russian vessels. My visual impression was that the largest piles were a brownish grey and were probably hake or dogfish," he said in a telephone interview.

"However, we also saw considerable piles of silvery fish which could have been either salmon or black Alaska cod," he added.

Most of the Soviet fleet was modern, the minister said, unlike the two battered side-draggers, the Kouzachin and German Titov, whose captains appeared in Victoria on charges of fishing in Canadian waters.

Mr. Davis said that to date there has been no positive identification of the catches the Soviet fleet are taking. The two vessels seized Aug. 4 by the Canadian fisheries patrol boat Howay and brought to Victoria were found to have no fish aboard.

However, the Soviet Union has in the past voiced approval in principle to the abstention principle, included in a treaty signed by Canada, the USA and Japan. The abstenion principle restrains the three countries from extensive salmon fishing on the high seas as a conservation measure.

A Canadian Fisheries official in Vancouver said that while the Soviets have never signed the agreement, they have extensive salmon fisheries of their own and have voiced approval of the principle.

★ ★ ★

As an example, he said, the Soviet Union and Japan have signed annually a treaty setting a quota for Japanese fishermen for the salmon catch taken on the high seas off the coastline of the USSR.

Juvenile Fined

PORT ALBERNI—A juvenile was fined $25 in juvenile court Friday morning after a 14-year-old Port Alberni boy was injured while shooting rats in the city dump at dusk Thursday night.

Police said that the boy and a friend were shooting the rats when another group, carrying 22 rifles, converged from the other side of the dump. A sound was heard and the juvenile charged fired a shot. The bullet hit Ronald Clark in the hand and went through into his thigh. He is reported to be in satisfactory condition in West Coast General Hospital.

Fishing Ban Ordered To Preserve Salmon

VANCOUVER (CP)—The federal fisheries department Friday announced that fishing areas 2A east and west and areas 2B east and west will be closed to salmon net fishing until 6 p.m. Sept. 7.

The department also announced two closures which go into effect at 6 p.m. Sunday and run until further notice:

The first closure, to preserve sockeye, is in waters of Tofino Inlet and Fortune Channel inside boundaries at Matlset Narrows and Psapee Narrows in Browning Entrance.

The second, to conserve chinook salmon, is in Muchalet Inlet, Hanna Channel and Tlupana Inlet inside boundaries at Hoise Point to San Carlos Point on Bligh Island, then to Conception Point and Anderson Point on Vancouver Island.

Indian White Paper Opposed

Jaycees Give Brief to Trudeau

NANAIMO — Nanaimo Junior Chamber of Commerce closed its regular meetings for the summer but there is still considerably activity going on.

On Friday night, 24-year-old Keith Jones, national Jaycee speak-off champion for 1969, waited in Vancouver to present a brief to Prime Minister Trudeau.

He and his committe had prepared the brief which opposed the recent white paper dealing with native Indians.

Jaycee president Ron Biggs said the presentation was not a political move. "This was the first opportunity to present it," he said.

On Monday, the Jaycees will be represented in a meeting between Nanaimo city council and Vancouver Island Exhibition Society to discuss the future of Exhibition Park buildings and the society.

The society postponed plans to hold its annual Class B fair for one year. The Jaycees have decided to fill the breach by holding an inter-club fun fair at Exhibition Park Aug. 29 and Aug. 30.

"This will serve two purposes," said committee chairman Don Muntain. "We're going to gain experience and we're continuing the spark of interest in the society. This is not a takeover or an attempt to steal their thunder.

★ ★ ★

"In fact, we hope they'll ask us to use this year's experience to help them when they re-open the VIX next year."

Port Alberni Controversy

Trailer Owners Fight New Occupancy Fee

PORT ALBERNI — A week ago, owners of mobile homes in Port Alberni were given 24 hours to vacate their trailer spaces after they had refused to pay a city occupancy fee. This weekend, the residents are still there.

"We haven't anything more," said Mrs. Berbeck, wife of Adam Berbeck, one of the founders of the Port Alberni Mobile Home Owners' Association which is pledged to fight the imposition of the fee.

"Actually we were out of town when the 24 hours ran out," she said Friday. "We came back on Monday and nothing happened. The notice was given by a city hall official on the telephone.

'STILL HERE'

"Whether it was an empty threat or not, I don't know. It must have been. We are still here and the others who have refused to pay the money are still here."

Mrs. Berbeck said a member of council had told them that the city did not have the legal authority to impose the notice. She said the city was now considering the legality of the fee — which the owners have described as a tax.

"How can they charge a person to live in their own home?" she asked.

END OF YEAR

Their rent was refused because they would not pay the money, said Mrs. Berbeck. One of their objections was that it had to be paid in advance "while other people have until the end of the year in which to pay."

Mrs. Berbeck said that two people went to city hall to pay the tax but city hall officials refused it because the city were not in a position to accept it.

Mrs. Berbeck said they would not object to the levy if the city allowed owners of mobile homes to vote on money bylaws like other property owners.

MAY BYLAW

The bylaw was passed in May and adopted June 23. It imposes the occupancy fee on all mobile homes in the city, and is based on size. Rates range from $4 a month for those with 300 or more square feet of floor space, to $10 a month for those of 900 square feet or more. No fee is levied on those with less than 300 square feet,

Mr. Berbeck agrees that the fee is actually a tax.

"And when they give me the franchise so I can vote on money bylaws, then I'll pay it," said Mr. Berbeck. Meanwhile he says he will go to jail rather than pay an additional $72 a year, in addition to space rental, to live in the city.

SMALL LOTS

A deputation from the Association called on city council when the bylaw was still under discussion and suggested a suitable area be set aside where owners could purchase small lots suitable for setting up their trailers.

Council promised at that time to take the matter under consideration. However the mobile home-owners say they received no satisfactory answer from the city council prior to the adoption of the bylaw.

At that time there were estimated to be 57 mobile homes occupied on a regular monthly basis at trailer parks in the city. City regulations do not permit the establishment of a mobile home on an ordinary city lot although numerous owners have purchased property outside city limits for that purpose.

The owners claim that in many cases their 50 and 60 foot trailers are worth more than many other small homes in the city, and that, in proportion to the investment by trailer court owners and services received, they pay just as much as people occupying apartments.

"The city feels no need to gouge the apartment dweller — why choose the owner of mobile homes who is already paying up to $45 a month for the rental of a small space in a trailer park?" one member asked.

In Parksville, which, in common with other communities has a growing colony of full-time dwellers in mobile homes, Mayor Edward Irving was asked how his council viewed the matter.

SURVEY MADE

"The matter of an occupancy fee is authorised only within municipal areas," Mayor Irving explained. "We made a survey when the authorization was passed by the provincial government, but didn't see any advantage to chasing a dozen or so residents outside the village."

Mayor Irving said he had made a motion, which will be presented to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities Convention in Kamloops in September, suggesting that the occupancy fee either be made applicable all over B.C. or abandoned.

"It should either apply to all mobile homes or to none" he said. "If it were to be established as a tax to help relieve the burden of education, for example, from other homeowners, rather than as a licence, going directly into municipal coffers, it might be more acceptable."

Cowichan Shoot

Nine Clubs Aiming For Contests

DUNCAN — Marksmen from eight Vancouver Island fish and game clubs, and one from Vancouver, will compete in the Vancouver Island Shooting League competition at the Vaux Road rifle range, Duncan, Sunday.

The shoot is sponsored and organized by Cowichan Fish and Game Club which some time ago constructed the range.

Competing riflemen will come from Port Alberni, Campbell River, Qualicum, Parksville, Nanaimo, Victoria, Vancouver and the Cowichan area. The contest will start at 10 a.m. and may last until dusk.

Prizes for highest scores will be awarded to the best in each of 12 different divisions.

The three positions in the centre-fire calibre rifle competition are standing, kneeling and prone. Similar competitions are sponsored by different clubs across Canada. The Cowichan contest will become an annual event.

Brush-Fire Battle Helped by Plane

NANAIMO — A brush fire which broke out Friday morning between Harewood and Chase River was practically out by late Friday afternoon after about a dozen drops by a Canso water-bomber.

SCRUB TREES

Forest Ranger Bill Howard said there was no real indication of what caused the outbreak but there was a freshly-dropped empty cigarette package near one of two children's shacks.

By 3 p.m., The Canso had made more than 11 passes and was then ordered back to its Victoria base.

At about 4 p.m., a bulldozer was brought in to break a trail through to the fire and afterward, Mr. Howard drove a tank-truck with hoses to finish off the small pockets of flame and to be ready in the event new fire broke out.

B.C. Forest Service crews were mopping-up a fire in the Cobble Hill area Friday night.

It started when diary farmer Wray Granfield of Telegraph Road was clearing land. A fire got out of control and spread to a hillside containing bush, but little tall timber.

About 10 acres was affected. Mr. Granfield used a bulldozer to build a firebreak. He said he had a permit to burn off scrubland.

Local riders, not to be outshone by old hands, like the Parmentiers and the Bowies from the Interior, have been working hard to get their drill team in shape and will put on a

This year, with the promise of more co-operation from the weatherman, and a considerable work on the rodeo grounds by local enthusiasts, the committee expects a record crowd at both this evening's and Sunday afternoon's events.

The Rodeo Ground is three miles from the city on the Beaver Creek Road and refreshment concessions have been set up at the site.

Fulford Sees Dancers

FULFORD — Pupils from the Violet Cameron School of Dancing of Whalley, B.C., will provide a program at Fulford Hall this evening.

Sponsors of the concert is the local Women's Institute.

Mrs. Ed Matterson, owner and teacher at the school, was recently made director of all-Canadian talent when she attended a National Academy of Dance convention at Santa Monica.

She took 36 pupils with her, some of whom will be appearing at Fulford. Soloist for the concert will be guitarist Tony Jensen of White Rock.

Official Opening

DUNCAN — The new $20,000 ambulance building on Canada Avenue will be officially opened by Alex Smith, chairman of Cowichan Valley Regional District Board at 11 a.m. today. Construction of the building was carried out through the board.

Flames Burn Sawmill

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — A small sawmill owned by George Nyberg at the northern end of Shawnigan Lake burned to the ground in a Friday evening fire the origin of which is still being investigated. Shawnigan Lake RCMP said the fire broke out at about 6 p.m. Total damage is estimated at $25,000. The loss is not covered by insurance.

Volunteer fire brigades from Shawnigan Lake and Mill Bay were unable to save anything at the mill but they kept the fire from spreading. The 16 firemen were helped by nearby residents and summer visitors.

Cougar Walks Into Camp

TOFINO — A hunter from Port Alberni, with his dogs, is due to go to Tofino to hunt for a cougar which was seen on the waterfront Thursday night.

It was seen at about 11:30 p.m. by Mrs. Chris Hansen who went out to feed her pet racoons. She called to her husband, saying "I've seen a lion."

Mr. Hansen, who with his wife operates the Blaine Myers Fish Camp, saw the cougar, shouted at it, but failed to frighten it off.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansen phoned the RCMP and Robert MacKenzie, trailer park owner and guide, but by that time the cougar had left, leaving some prints in the soft sand.

Police believe that the camp's floodlight and the smell of fish might have attracted the animal.

ANGRY MOB SHOUTS DOWN PIERRE

'Dictatorship Seed' Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was pelted with papers and a banana peel Friday night by an angry crowd of war protesters that smashed a window and set a fire at the Seaforth Armory where he was speaking.

Chanting "Trudeau is a traitor," about 300 placard-carrying demonstrators pounded on the armory doors shortly after the prime minister entered the building to attend a Liberal fund-raising dinner.

The prime minister went inside surrounded by security men after he was unsuccessful in an attempt to speak to the demonstrators from the top of a sound truck.

* * *

After arriving, Mr. Trudeau hopped up on a sound truck and attempted to speak to the demonstrators, mostly young people. He was hit in the back by a banana peel and others threw wads of paper at him.

He jumped off the truck and was whisked inside after shouts and screams prevented him from being heard. Some of the demonstrators followed him up to the door and pounded on it.

Others broke a window in the armory. The crowd quieted a few minutes later and moved across the street to a park where they ate rice and drank tea.

* * *

A heap of paper and cardboard was set ablaze a few feet from the armory door. The blaze was extinguished by police a few seconds later.

The demonstrators carried signs reading "Our PET is a male chauvinist pig," "End Canada's Complicity in Vietnam," "No money, no education, we need jobs or an education."

The unidentified girl who hit the prime minister with the banana peel carried one reading: "Hustle grain, not

'Do You Have to Be President of U.S.?'

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A commissionaire at the Abbotsford International Air Show firmly blocked the way Friday when a man attempted to follow Prime Minister Trudeau and his party of cabinet ministers as they retired to an office area.

"How do you get identified?" the man asked. "Do you have to be president of the United States?"

'Like V-E at Ogden Point'

Two Soviet fishing vessels were warmly cheered by thousands of Victorians when they sailed from Ogden Point just before 10 p.m. Friday after the two skippers had been fined $2,500 each on charges of fishing within Canada's 12-mile limit.

"It was like V-E Day at Ogden Point," photographer Jim Ryan said. "There were people with children, with baby carriages and babes in arms."

"Girls were kissing and hugging the Russian seamen. The Russians were giving kids apples and older people Russian cigarettes. They invited people aboard the trawlers to look around. The whole area was jammed with cars and people."

Mr. Ryan said he heard one small child say to his mother "Mummy, they don't look very mean to me."

* * *

One of the Russian crewmen told a fisheries officer in broken English that "if you ever come into our territory, all we'll do is get you drunk," the photographer said.

George Dawson of King Bros., ship agents, said he felt the events at the dock "cemented good relations in some manner with the Russians."

"They met a lot of people and when they left they were cheered. It was a very friendly demonstration."

The ships were under orders to return directly to Russia, where, according to one of the skippers, they will face another trial.

* * *

The trial of Capt. Edward John Morozov, 29, of the Soviet fishing vessel Gherman Titov resumed Friday with the defence calling as its first witness Capt. Boris Rolenko, 28, master of the second Soviet trawler, the Kouzachin.

Both trawlers, of the side dragger type, were seized Aug. 4 and escorted to Victoria by the Canadian Fisheries patrol vessel Howay, under the command of Capt. Chesley Power.

The charges of fishing within Canada's 12-mile limit were laid under the Canadian Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, which provides for a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine and confiscation of the vessel or the catch or both.

* * *

Judge William Ostler ruled at the start of the trial Thursday that the Soviet captains would be tried separately. However, when the trial of Capt. Morozov ended Friday, counsel for both sides agreed the evidence submitted in the Morozov case be accepted as applying to the Rolenko case. Judge Ostler then pronounced sentence.

Capt. Rolenko testified the Soviet fleet, of which the Gherman Tivov and Kouzachin were a part, moved from its winter fishing grounds in the Bering Strait to fish off Oregon and the west coast of Vancouver Island in April this year.

Through two court interpreters, he described the fishing operation of the Soviet trawlers in some detail. It was the policy of the Soviet fleet, he said, to set nets at a distance of about 1.5 miles on the international side of the Canadian limit and then head out to sea.

He did not deny being in Canadian waters when the Howay pulled alongside the Soviet vessels at 7:19 a.m. Monday.

Smaller Profits Just One Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday the federal government will apply voluntary restraints urged by the Economic Council of Canada by curtailing inflationary trends in the government itself.

Asked if he thought voluntary curbs could work, the prime minister said: "I'm saying it's a first start and I'm saying that as a government we are going to apply that voluntary restraint. (See also Page 5)

- "In our case, in the case of the government, it will mean curtailing many different programs. We'll tell the people that they can't at the same time complain about inflation and then ask for the government to be spending more money . . ."

The prime minister said getting people "to face their responsibilities" would be a government responsibility.

"For businessmen this will mean instead of increasing the prices it could mean reducing the profits," he said.

Air Dive Fatal As Trudeau Attends Show

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A young American pilot was killed Friday when his home-built aircraft crashed half a mile from where Prime Minister Trudeau and six cabinet ministers were watching an air show.

The Mini-Mustang, piloted by Scott Nelskog, 20, of Edmonds, Wash., dived into the ground just after Mr. Trudeau, in 80-degree weather, opened the Abbotsford international air show.

The tiny, 85-horsepower plane was one of two performing before Mr. Trudeau and a crowd of 40,000. It completed a roll and nose-dived into the ground from 200 feet.

* * *

There was no fire and most of the crowd were not aware of the crash until emergency vehicles raced to the scene.

It was the first fatal accident in the popular air show's eight-year history.

Mr. Trudeau arrived by helicopter from Vancouver to open the three-day show, North America's largest, 40 miles east of Vancouver.

It is expected to draw more than 300,000 people by the time the show ends Sunday.

The prime minister spent about three hours there. After viewing the Bell 206-A turbine helicopter, he made his way through a jostling crowd, which gave him a quiet greeting, clapping and whistling.

* * *

Security was tight. At one stage, Mr. Marchand, who was not wearing an identity badge, was refused admission to the second-floor office area from which the prime minister's party watched the show.

PARIS (AP) — France, bowing to pressures inside and outside the country, devalued the franc by 12½ per cent Friday.

The immediate result makes French goods more competitive in world trade, promising better stability to the economy, but the over-all effect may be to bring other nations' currencies under pressure and throw the international monetary situation into confusion.

Britain officially sought to dispel any thoughts of a new devaluation of the pound.

NOT SO SURE

"We have no comment except to rule out any possibility of Britain following France," said a treasury spokesman in London. Others there were not so sure.

Sir George Bolton, chairman of the Bank of London and South America, commented:

"The French devaluation will cause another period of anxiety among the leading foreign currencies. If any leading currency is devalued for domestic rea-

Campground Shootup Fatal to Five

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—A shooting spree which authorities said apparently erupted from an attempted eviction left five persons dead, including the alleged gunman, his parents and a minister, at a church campground in a Birmingham suburb Friday.

Police said Charles Hagood, 33, who lived at the campground, was believed to have done the shootings, which also injured a sixth person. Hagood's body was found in the house when officers rushed him.

Quality Standards Now Official

Pure Water Rules Old Hat Here

By IAN STREET

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark says the province's new water quality standards which were officially proclaimed Friday had already been in effect in Greater Victoria for the past three monts.

He said the new standards, produced after many months of work, were already being enforced and had been for some time. Medical health officers in Greater Victora and elsewhere were made aware in advance of the major provisions.

"So far as domestic sewage is concerned," said Mr. Loffmark, "there will be no change in my stand, and municipalities can continue to expect that I will insist upon treatment of sewage before discharge, with the single exception of the outfall at Macaulay Point."

"In no case," he said, "is it intended that the standards will authorize discharge that will bring the receiving body of water up to the minimum level.

"Where the quality of water is presently well within the accepted level, it will be expected to remain so."

At a press conference Friday, Victoria Socred candidates Trade Minister Waldo Skillings and Public Works Minister W. N. Chant both endorsed the new water quality standards. Mr. Chant said his department was spending up to $300,000 on construction of a sewer line serving the new Victoria Vocational School and Glendale Hospital, to prevent further pollution of the Gorge.

Mr. Loffmark said the purpose of the new standards was to secure and maintain such water quality levels in the province, both for drinking waters and surface waters, as would give assured protection for human health and safety.

The document has been drawn up in a form that will permit modification and amendment as new information becomes available.

The document states the policy of the health branch regarding all surface, ground and salt waters is to encourage programs which will provide waters of the best

Sewers in Panhandle: October Start Seen

By NANCY BROWN

Sewers for the Esquimalt Panhandle, originally promised for completion this month, might be started in October according to municipal engineer William Gerry.

He said a council initiation to get the $167,000 project started had not run into much objection.

"There have been one or two squawks, but we have received no written objection or complaint about the plan," he said.

PETITION DEADLINE

Residents have until Aug. 29 to petition against the plan which will cost $1,000 a lot or $120.42 annually for 15 years. Half of the 28 property owners concerned would have to object to the plan for the council-initiated project to fail.

The sewers were promised to the former View Royal residents in a form letter from the Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant and council sent to Panhandle residents just before an amalgamation referendum held last year.

LACK OF ACTION

There have been complaints from Panhandle residents of lack of action on the part of council since they joined the municipality.

Mayor Bryant said that under the present plan 80 per cent of the Panhandle, belonging to 17 residents, could be sewered. The work will be undertaken in three sections, starting at the Shirley Road end.

Redistribution of land belonging to the remaining 11 property owners could hold up sewering of the remaining 20 per cent of the land unless residents agreed to replotting plans being drawn up by the engineers.

LAND SUBDIVIDED

The land has been subdivided in the past into irregularly shaped lots which made provision of roads and sewers impracticable, said Mr. Gerry.

He said the poorly planned area has had boundary lines redrawn with the owners receiving as nearly as possible comparable land to that which they held previously.

Approval of new right of way for roads was needed before sewers could be put in, he said.

TWO OWNERS

He added that failure of any two property owners to approve the plans could hold up sewering for all the people involved in the replotting area.

Council has also spelled out the charges for provision of services in the formerly unorganized territory.

Property owners will pay the entire cost of streets, boulevards, sidewalks and street lighting according to their frontage on the serviced areas.

POTENTIAL LOTS

While the cost of sewers has been set at the promised $1,000 a lot, property owners will pay that amount for each potential lot into which their land could be subdivided.

Skillings Shreds Teachers' Stand

ELECTION '69

By IAN STREET

Trade Minister Waldo Skillings has attacked the B.C. Teachers' Federation for practising "politics at its very worst" in the election campaign.

He told a press conference late Friday that as a former teacher he was "very disappointed" by the position taken by the profession.

"Teachers are hired to teach—not to set policy," Mr. Skillings said. "Our teachers are the highest paid in Canada, and we have the finest teaching staff in all Canada. But I think they should stay out of politics and do their job."

Mr. Skillings said the BCTF campaign "won't fool the public." He added that the only objection the teachers seemed to have to the government's education finance formula was that it "allows the people who pay the taxes to say whether there should be frills."

"They want to put a stop to that. They don't want the taxpayers to have this say," he said.

Mr. Skillings noted that Dean Neville Scarfe, head of the faculty of education at the University of British Columbia, returned from a tour of four continents and claimed this province's education system was better than any he had seen abroad.

Works Minister W. N. Chant, who is Mr. Skillings' running mate in Victoria, told the press conference: "The taxpayers will have their say (regarding the stand taken by the teachers' federation) when they cast their ballots on Aug. 27."

Both candidates joined Premier Bennett in predicting a Social Credit majority win at the polls. The press conference was held at the Skillings home at 1721 Rockland, about one hour after Mr. Skillings was discharged from hospital, where he has been undergoing treatment for a kidney injury.

"In five weeks in hospital I've met a lot of people," Mr. Skillings said. "I've never heard so many say they will vote Social Credit for the first time in the election. I'm predicting the Bennett government will be returned with a minimum of 35 to 36 seats (out of 55)."

★ ★ ★

He added: "There are going to be two people with very red faces in this province after Berger and McGeer have been predicting the seats they're going to win. After the election Pat (Liberal leader Patrick McGeer) is going to have to go back to adjudicating whales."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Skillings said he had been ordered by his doctor to "take it easy" because it would take several more weeks for his seriously bruised kidney to clear up. "Bill has been carrying the ball for both of us. But now I'm prepared to do anything they want me to do."

He said much of his campaigning would be done over radio and television.

'Lying Around' Since June?

Big Loss Feared From Unsent Wire

By ALAN ANDERSON

Embarrassed officials of Canadian Pacific-Canadian National Telecommunications admitted Friday the company "might have made a mistake" in failing to send a telegram handed in to them June 30.

For 29-year-old Greek immigrant Nick Roubekas, the company's admission is small consolation. CP-CN's "mistake" could cost him $20,000, he says.

A distressed man, Mr. Roubekas explained that he sent a telegram — or thought he did — to a real estate agent in Corinth, Greece, authorizing him to go ahead with purchase of a house on behalf of his sister, who still lives there.

"I went into the cable office at 1102 Government Street at about 1 p.m. on June 30," he said. "I wrote out, in English, the message I wanted to send.

"I handed it in, and a girl there read it back to me. There was no misunderstanding about what it said.

That was 40 days ago.

When 38 days had gone by without a reply, Mr. Roubekas became concerned and Thursday he checked with the CP-CN office.

"I spoke to a lady there and asked her to confirm that the cable had been sent," he said.

"She said 'Of course it was sent. It must have gone. We don't just keep them lying around, you know.'

"But I told her if it had been sent I should have received a reply, and finally she agreed to look into it."

A day later, on Friday, the CP-CN Telecommunications office telephoned Mr. Roubekas and admitted in some embarrassment that this time, apparently, the cable had just been kept "lying around."

Mr. Roubekas said the company offered to send the cable immediately, with an explanation that it had been delayed by their office.

"But I don't know if that's going to do any good," he said. "In Greece, the laws of property are very complicated, and my sister can't do anything without my consent.

"This delay could cost my sister and me $20,000 — maybe more," he said.

A supervisor at CP-CN Telecommunications told the Colonist he had "heard of some kind of mixup," but said he was not authorized to give any details. "Anyway, we're too busy right now," he added.

The company's head agent, L.A. Nicholls, was the only person who could talk about the case, he said, "and he won't be in the office until Monday."

Asked if the company accepted any liability for its error, the supervisor replied: "Oh, no — I don't think so. It's right there on the back of our form, you know; it says that we're not liable if a message is not transmitted or not delivered."

Nick Roubekas came to Canada five years ago, and has lived in Victoria for 3½ years. He works as night cook at the Dominion Hotel.

Like many immigrants, he has often held two jobs at a time and worked hard to save money. In this way he managed to buy a house at 463 Superior Street.

"Now I could lose all that I've worked for, just through someone else's mistake," he said.

"It doesn't seem fair to me."

20-Storey Building Planned

A Vancouver firm said Friday it wants to build a 20-storey apartment-commercial structure at Pandora and Fort next year.

City Manager Dennis Young said the firm, Reid Properties Ltd., has made no application for a building permit. He said also that the proposed height of the building is beyond the limit allowed by a city bylaw.

Representatives of the company have had preliminary talks with the city's staff, Mr. Young said.

The same firm recently announced plans to develop the Victoria waterfront with a $25,000,000 complex.

In Friday's announcement, company president J. A. Reid said the 20-storey structure would be named the Stadacona Triangle and would be built at a cost of about $4,500,000.
